Delinquent delivered to 'guardian' as judge's shock waves spread

'He was scared—just like I was'

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

He was 13 years old, looked nine and, flanked by two burly Sheriff's officers, was obviously bewildered and stunned by it all.

His juvenile record of "delinquencies," a long one involving theft, damage to property and a high-speed car chase, had led him to Victoria at 11:45 a.m. Tuesday, the central figure in an unprecedented court decision by Nanaimo Judge Stanley Wardill.

It was Wardill, frustrated by the never-ending parade of juvenile delinquents through his court and the lack of government action to correct a deteriorating situation, who had imposed a $250 fine on the legal guardian of the child and ordered the same guardian to pay $50 to the Salvation Army in Nanaimo for damage done to property.

It was Wardill, who having pronounced the fine, had also ordered that the child, in the custody of two sheriff's officers, be "delivered personally" to his legal guardian.

And it was Victor Belknap, superintendent of child welfare in British Columbia, who now put his arm around the shoulders of the diminutive youngster and ushered him into his office.

Legally Belknap is the guardian to the 7,000 trouble-plagued youngsters in care of B.C. Legally he is the guardian to an average 200 youngsters before the courts at any one time.

He has no say in the selection of the children placed in his care. That decision also comes from the courts after all other methods within the courts, the probationary service and the family, have failed.

The court makes the order that the delinquent who shows little signs of correcting a downward spiral be placed in the care of the superintendent of child welfare.

Until Monday, it had always been assumed that following such a court order "the office of the superintendent" became the guardian. Wardill didn't accept that interpretation. He made the superintendent personally the guardian.

Belknap has paid the fine with a personal cheque. And the damages. Now he's wondering about tomorrow.

Will Wardill's decision be isolated, just designed to force the government to look at a specific problem?

Or will it be regarded as a precedent by other frustrated judges?

"I have to be concerned about that," Belknap said Tuesday. "I haven't gone as far as to transfer all of my assets to my wife's name, but I have come close to doing that.

"And I have suggested to the minister in a letter that it might be better for me to resign a least until this thing is cleared up."

Angry dealers go to AIB over hike-plus

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

The gas price increase has come with an even bigger jolt than the hapless B.C. motorist expected and the federal Anti-Inflation Board is going to hear about it — from its own dealers.

With the public geared for an increase of five to six cents a gallon, Imperial Oil Ltd. set the stage Tuesday for what amounts to hikes of 7.3 cents in the wholesale price of regular gas and 7.4 cents for premium. Service station operators can charge even more.

Some of the company's own dealers on Vancouver Island and in Vancouver were among those complaining that the AIB authorized increases of only 5.7 cents.

Imperial Oil — one of three major companies announcing increases Tuesday — offers a somewhat complicated explanation of how it is staying within the guidelines.

But AIB representatives on the West Coast remained confused and sought an answer from the board

"We've received quite a few complaints today and I intend to call Ottawa in the morning to see just what the board's position is," said Jackie Watt, a senior AIB complaints and inquiries officer in Vancouver.

"A number of the complaints have come from dealers," Mrs. Watt told the Colonist.

Whatever the case, the long-feared dollar-a-gallon prices will now become a reality in northern B.C

Things weren't that bad in Greater Victoria, although the hodge-podge of increased prices at the pump ranged all the way up to eight cents a gallon Tuesday.

The majority of dealers appeared to be holding the price line until their current supply is replaced, or until they are advised to boost the rate.

But that situation isn't expected to last more than a day or two.

"We aren't going to change the price until we pump what we've got in the ground," said a spokesman for Burnside Esso Service. "It wouldn't seem fair to make the change until we get a new load at the new price."

Others said much the same thing. But the prices that did increase Tuesday moved up

Dublin seeks sweeping powers

DUBLIN (Reuter) — Prime Minister Liam Cosgrave asked the Irish parliament Tuesday to declare a state of emergency and give his government sweeping new powers to combat terrorism.

Opening a debate on proposed emergency powers, Cosgrave said the new laws were needed because crimes by men of violence had brought "discredit to the name of Irishmen throughout the world."

"Let the message go out clearly from here today that the Irish people, through their elected representatives, their democratic government and their security forces, are pledged to break and rid our country once and for all of this conspiracy of hate and evil," he said.

The appeal for a state of emergency — opposed by the opposition Fianna Fail party — is likely to be approved by parliament. A state of emergency would give the government's proposed laws immunity from challenge on constitutional grounds

The draft legislation includes authority for police to hold guerrilla suspects without charge for up to seven days instead of 48 hours; sweeping new powers of search and arrest for troops and police; and an increase in the maximum penalty for membership in the outlawed Irish Republican Army to seven years from two years in prison.

The measures are primarily aimed at controlling the violent IRA campaign to unite the Irish Republic with British-ruled Northern Ireland.

Cosgrave said the government decided to act after the assassination of British ambassador Christopher Ewart-Biggs outside Dublin last month.

Jack Lynch, leader of the Fianna Fail, said his party would support the government in "reasonable and appropriate" steps to combat terrorism, but that the current situation did not justify a state of emergency.

"We believe it will do nothing to prevent crimes of this nature or bring about the detection and prosecution of those responsible," Lynch said.

Huge second blast kills 3 firemen

GADSDEN, Ala. (UPI) — A gasoline tanker exploded at a service station Tuesday, and after firemen and spectators rushed to the scene a second, three-block blast killed three of them and injured 28 other persons.

Authorities identified two of the dead as Fire Chief Ralph Spear and Fireman Mike Thornton. The third fireman was not identified immediately.

All three were inside the service station when the second blast destroyed it, police said.

The initial explosion was apparently set off by static electricity from a tanker driver's clothing, authorities said.

Firemen and spectators arrived and were caught in what one witness said was a "massive" blast that sent flames "hundreds of feet in the air." The explosion covered three acres, authorities said.

Police said that in addition to the demolished service station and tank truck, the blast destroyed a fire truck, two mobile homes in a nearby area, two other large trucks, five vans and three cars, all of which were parked.

Bennett blasts protest

'Foolish move'

Premier Bennett said Tuesday the Oct. 14 nationwide work stoppage called by the Canadian Labor Congress to protest federal anti-inflation legislation was "a foolish, counter-productive and wasteful move."

He said if labor wanted to make a gesture on that day, each person could donate a day's pay and use it in a "significant social gesture," rather than lowering productivity.

Hearst companions get 11 years to life

LOS ANGELES (AP) — William and Emily Harris, one-time fugitive travelling companions of newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst, were sentenced Tuesday to indeterminate prisons terms of 11 years to life on convictions of kidnapping, robbery and car theft.

Superior Court Judge Mark Brandler, who had listened to more than an hour of emotional statements from the Harrises and their lawyers, said he felt there was no reason for leniency "considering the gravity of the offences committed."

The Harrises were impassive as the sentences were pronounced. They had declared earlier that they did not expect justice or understanding for their revolutionary ideals.

The couple declined to stand for sentencing.

At the end of an angry speech just before sentencing, Harris had declared: "Judge Brandler, you can bring on the jugglers and the dancing bears and get this charade over with."

Brandler said the Harrises had shown they were prepared and had indeed threatened to kill their victims, if necessary, during the crime spree.

William Harris, 31, and his wife, 29, were sentenced on five counts of kidnapping and theft arising out of a Los Angeles sporting goods store shooting in which Miss Hearst was also involved.

In a 20-minute speech addressed to the small crowd consisting mostly of reporters sitting behind a bullet-proof screen in the courtroom, rather than to Brandler, Mrs. Harris said:

"I am a revolutionary and I have never lost my hopes for

Doctors approve needles

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons has approved the general use of acupuncture by member physicians.

College registrar Dr. William McClure, writing in the September issue of the B.C. Medical Journal, says the college has lifted its rule limiting use of acupuncture to study and research.

He says doctors should take an acceptable course of study in acupuncture before using it, and should be aware of possible hazards, such as the danger to cardiac patients of using electrical stimulating currents.

Guerrillas stage biggest attack

SALISBURY (UPI) — Rocket and mortar-equipped black guerrillas screaming war cries through megaphones attacked a Rhodesian camp near the Mozambican border in what government sources Tuesday called the biggest guerrilla attack of the four-year border conflict.

A military communique withheld most details on the Monday attack, but said "some casualties" were suffered. It specifically mentioned six wounded troopers.

The communique said troops killed 22 guerrillas in the past three days, bringing to 58 the number slain in the past week. It was one of the highest guerrilla death tolls in such a period since the war began in December, 1972.

Military sources said Rhodesian troops pursued the guerrillas who carried out Monday's attack. The sources said the possibility was not excluded that government troops would go into Mozambique after them.

Government sources called the attack the biggest single guerrilla action of the war.

Reports from Umtali said the camp was a partially completed base 90 miles north of the border city.

The reports said the attack began before dawn Monday with a 45-minute rocket and mortar barrage on the camp. Then the guerrillas launched a ground assault with small arms, some screaming war cries through bullhorns.

The attack came during a week of escalation in guerrilla warfare, with Rhodesia publishing figures indicating 1,577 guerrillas had been killed since the war began, 964 this year.

One day in jail imposed on electrical Robin Hood

MONTREAL (CP) — A 24-hour visit to jail was the penalty imposed Tuesday on a modern-day Robin Hood who reconnected electricity to welfare recipients whose power had been cut off because they failed to pay their bills.

Jean Pilon, of the Aid to Fire and Flood Victims organization, was sentenced by Judge Claude Joncas after pleading guilty last May to stealing four Hydro-Quebec meters and diverting $131.52 worth of electricity.

Pilon explained that he had planned to return the meters to Hydro-Quebec, his aim being to help the company understand that some people on welfare did not have enough money to pay their bills.

He used knife blades to reconnect the current after the four meters had been sealed by Hydro - Quebec, between Oct. 19 and Dec. 4, 1975.

Last January, Pilon and his group were ordered to stop restoring gas service to homes cut off for non-payment of bills. He admitted service had been restored to about 30 homes.

Mexico floats peso after 22 years

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The Mexican government announced Tuesday night that it had decided to let the peso float freely, abandoning the 22-year-old rate of 12.5 pesos to the U.S. dollar

The surprise announcement was made by Treasury Secretary Mario Ramon Beteta, who said the change would go into effect immediately. It ended months of government denials that the currency would be devalued.

"The floating will be regulated in such a way that the indications of the market will have to establish the new exchange rate," Beteta said reaction by Belknap. He says he and his entire department will stand behind the superintendent whatever happens.

Vander Zalm, in the Nanaimo decision, does not stand responsible for the behavior of a recalcitrant delinquent.

Belknap does.

"I didn't like it, but I could write a cheque for $300," he said Tuesday after meeting the youngster responsible for his problems. "But what will happen if another judge holds me responsible for the burning down of a million dollar school?"

No one volunteered an answer.

It isn't the main reason Belknap feels he has to at least contemplate resignation.

"I haven't had the full opportunity to discuss the situation with my minister, but I hope to some time this week," Belknap said. "I suppose I am reacting in a very personal way to the judge's decision. But in this office we must operate on a trust relationship with the courts. And I just feel that I must now lay myself open to examination by the provincial cabinet.

"I'll admit that more mundane aspects play a part. The whole question of liability comes into being for the first time."

Belknap said requests for reimbursement had been made to him before, but never by the courts.

"It isn't long ago that one of your (reporter) colleagues came to me to ask me for $50 because a four-year-old had scratched his car with a nail," he said with a smile. "Now one judge has said I am responsible for the actions of any juvenile placed in my care by the courts."

Wardill's decision has left the entire child welfare department in shock. They know, perhaps better than the judge, what the problems are. But they also know that they lack the power to correct whatever deficiencies exist.

Now, while waiting for the politicians to satisfy the demands of the courts, they sit exposed — to what?

Belknap doesn't know. Nor does his administrative officer, A. G. "Gil" Gilmore.

"We are just as bewildered as the youngsters," Gilmore said. "This has never happened before. We're a little shocked by it all, and we don't fully understand the implications yet. Other than to know that the court has ruled the guardian, personally, can be held responsible."

Belknap himself shudders to think of the ramifications of the Wardill decision. And he guesses that child care superintendents across Canada are wondering about their futures in the wake of the Nanaimo decision.

"But I don't know what effect it will really have," he said "The implications are tremendously serious. What they will be in full scope I just don't know."

The Wardill decision carries implications for more than Belknap.

"In the past it has been the practice of the courts to generally hold the juvenile responsible for his or her actions, not the parents," Belknap said. "In some communities parents have called for other parents to be made to pay, but the courts have stayed away from that problem."

"This is a first."

If other courts follow Wardill's lead, the parents of juveniles could, by court order, be forced to pay compensation for damage caused by their children.

That concerns Belknap and his staff. But not half as much as the question: "Who will take the job of superintendent if the Nanaimo decision establishes a precedent?"

The juvenile who has tossed himself and the child welfare division into the storm of controversy spent 15 minutes in Belknap's office after he was turned over by the sheriff's officers.

Belknap greeted him, face to face with "Hi, let's go in here and have a chat."

After the conversation, Belknap escorted the boy to a waiting car where he was to be taken, "like any other juvenile in our care," to a Greater Victoria foster home. Gilmore said there was no guarantee the foster home would work. "We'll have to wait and see whether he will accept it or not, just as we always have to wait," he said.

"Scared, just like I was," answered the superintendent.

The Imperial gallon

anywhere from three to eight cents a gallon.

The way was paved Monday by the B.C. Energy Commission for the new inflationary bite of the motorist's dollar. The commission decided to remove price guidelines and open the door to increases approved by the AIB.

The first three oil companies responded quickly Tuesday with Gulf Oil announcing a six-cent-a-gallon boost in wholesale price, Chevron Canada coming in at 5.7 cents and Imperial at 5.6 cents.

But the Imperial story didn't end there.

A company spokesman in Vancouver, offering what he said would be a "technical and involved explanation," admitted the wholesale price was really going to 7.3 cents (regular) and 7.4 cents (premium) because of an additional 1.7-cent feature.

This was the former dealer "price allowance" per gallon — actually a subsidy from the company — which the spokesman says is to be withdrawn.

What it actually means is that Imperial is no longer willing to put up the 1.7 cents and the customer is going to have to take over.

However, the spokesman said there is "likely" to be a new support program for the dealers. This would be needed, he said, because "there is a very competitive market right now and that has to be recognized."

The energy board's decision allows the industry to deal in prices that were actually approved some time ago by the AIB, he said.

"What this meant in the past (B.C. freeze) is that B.C. worked on a different scale," the spokesman said. "Distortions crept into the picture and we are now going to try and even things out.

"The decision Monday puts us back in a position which is consistent with the rest of the provinces."

Transport Minister Jack Davis said Tuesday the energy commission will continue to monitor prices but will no longer set guidelines.

Team Work 76 will test American-European logistical backup for the first time with 200 warships, 30 submarines and 300 planes from the United States, Canada, Belgium, Denmark, Britain, Holland, Norway, Portugal and West Germany.

Oak Bay man Lucky Leo

An Oak Bay man was one of four British Columbians who won $1,000 Tuesday in the second early bird draw of the Lucky Leo lottery held in Nanaimo.

Seven other Victorians were also winners in the draw.

Jean Alder of 350 Douglas was one of five $100 winners while Marjorie Lindsay-Dixon of 2135 McLaren in Oak Bay and E. L. Halliday of 1530 Church in Saanich were among 15 winners of $50 prizes.

Four of the 40 winners of $25 were Betty Wittcher of 4112 Tuxedo in Saanich, Fenton Oldham of 361 Irving in Victoria, William Henly of 1143 Chapman in Victoria and Bud Curry of 2500 Florence Lake in Saanich.

All eight will have their tickets returned to the barrel for the Oct. 31 draw in which the first prize will be $100,000.

"I will not stoop so low as to ask Brandler for mercy."

Harris said the violence he saw in Vietnam turned his stomach, but he came back from military service still a non-violent idealist.

"We are being sent to prison because our ideas are a threat to the way the present social order is visualized," Harris said.

The 22-year-old newspaper heiress, who was later won over to the views of the SLA, went into hiding for 16 months with the Harrises after the sporting goods store incident, and faces trial next January on the same charges.

Miss Hearst opened up with two bursts of machine-gun fire from a van across the street to free the Harrises after employees of the sporting goods store accused them of shoplifting and tried to arrest them.

Your Good Health

By Dr. G. C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am to have surgery for removal of the thymus gland. I have not been able to find out much about this surgery, but what I have heard sounds encouraging. My thymus is enlarged. Can you explain? — R.W.

There is much we don't know about this strange little gland. It is located just above the heart.

We do know that it increases in size from birth to puberty, then sort of "shrivels up" almost completely in adults. Its main role thus seems to be in the early years of life. It is important in the development of the body's lymph system and general immunity.

The thymus is quite active, even during the fetal months. It has even been suggested that one reason pregnant women seem to enjoy general good health during pregnancy is because of the activity of the fetus's thymus, which apparently secretes an important hormone.

Although it decreases in size in most adults, the thymus can develop cysts or other growths. It has been associated with myasthenia gravis (a nerve-muscle disorder). Removal of the thymus has been reported as successful in 80 per cent of myasthenia gravis patients.

Your letter doesn't offer any clues as to the reason for removal. Because the gland appears to have done most of its work in pre-puberty years, removal can be done safely.

Apartheid doomed—Kissinger

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — State Secretary Henry Kissinger, calling South Africa's apartheid policy "incompatible with any concept of human dignity," said Tuesday he hoped positive steps would be taken to end racial separation and other discriminatory policies in that white-ruled country.

"No system that leads to periodic upheavals and violence can possibly be just and acceptable, nor can it last," Kissinger said in referring to the recent riots by the black majority in South Africa.

He spoke before the Opportunities Industrialization Centres, a predominantly black group that trains young people in privately-organized schools in the United States and around the world.

He said outbreaks of racial violence in South Africa "have underscored the inevitable instability of a system that institutionalizes human inequality in a way repugnant to the world's conscience."

Kissinger said that in his planned meeting with South African Prime Minister John Vorster in Switzerland during the weekend, "we will use all our influence to bring about peaceful change, equality of opportunity and basic human rights in South Africa."

Kissinger said the situation in South Africa "continues to be highly volatile" and "time is running out."

Kissinger said he hoped the U.S. could contribute to a turning point in Africa's history, but added:

"There is no guarantee that our current diplomatic effort will succeed."

Kissinger said the current U.S. position on Africa, which took its present shape last April, was designed primarily to find "the common ground among the differing objectives of the multitude of nations and groups involved."

He said he was convinced "there is common ground," but it had to be recognized and used by black leaders."

No doubt about success

Viking data inconclusive

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — A Viking scientist, summing up a review of the spacecraft's findings on the Martian surface said Tuesday the results of the biology experiments were "inconclusive" and not understood.

"The biological experiment is inconclusive at this time but has yielded some clues to the chemistry of the surface," Gerald Soffen, chief project scientist, said.

"The chemistry is going to be complicated on Mars," he said. "Anybody who thinks we understand it, I think, is wrong. We don't understand it."

He said, however, there was no doubt about the success of Viking.

"We have landed a spacecraft on the surface of Mars and we have some remarkable data."

Dr. Joshua Lederberg, a member of the biology team discussed the needs of future missions and said he could imagine a "son of Viking" program.

He suggested the north polar ice cap as a candidate for a future landing site.

"The polar regions are prime candidates for understanding the planet and even, paradoxically, for biology, despite the extreme temperatures," he said.

Lederberg, of Stanford University, said also that if life existed on Mars it had found a different adaptation than life forms on earth.

"We can no longer be confident," he said, "that no matter where you look, you will find life."

Lederberg said he was an advocate of more time and more research between space missions, but added "I can imagine a son-of-Viking program to take advantage of the investments in the spacecraft now available."

Dr. Hal Masursky, of the orbiter imaging team, said pictures of the Viking 2 landing site, had indicated it would be safe to put the half-billion-dollar robot on the Utopia plains.

Meanwhile, in London, a U.S. space scientist said a manned voyage to Mars would be socially unacceptable this century because of the cost. Dr. Carl Sagan of Cornell University said the manned journey would cost $100 billion.

He said the Viking mission had been a spectacular success, and the next mission might include a Viking rover which would cross the Martian surface.

Scotland Yard says 'Cool it'

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard's top policeman urged militant black youths to "cool it" Tuesday after a night of rioting at a West Indian carnival. More than 450 persons were injured, shops and houses were looted or damaged, and 60 persons were arrested.

"If I have a message to everyone involved it is: Cool it," Sir Robert Mark, metropolitan police commissioner, told a news conference. "It may seem melodramatic to say this, but when temperatures rise and bricks begin to fly, it's easy for someone to lose his life."

Mark said about 150,000 revellers at the three-day carnival and about 1,600 policemen were in the heavily West Indian Notting Hill area when the trouble erupted as police tried to arrest a pickpocket.

"Almost all the trouble came from young people—youths and girls between the ages of 14 and 19," Mark said. "It was definitely discernible that they were using this occasion to rob other people taking part in the festival."

Scotland Yard said 60 persons—50 of them non-white—were arrested. They face a total of 75 charges, including robbery, possession of offensive weapons, theft, threatening behavior and assault and obstruction.

The outbreak had racial overtones because many black youths view the London police as representatives of the white establishment. Despite recruitment drives, the metropolitan police have only 52 nonwhites in a force of about 23,000.

Seizures, torture laid to Chileans

GENEVA (UPI) — The International Commission of Jurists accused Chile's military regime Tuesday of making illegal arrests and torturing prisoners, and said 52 persons arrested there since January had disappeared.

A UN committee, meanwhile, demanded a full investigation into what it termed "alarming reports" of human rights violations in Uganda.

The subcommission on the prevention of discrimination said it would recommend that the UN Commission on Human Rights "make a thorough study of the human rights situation in Uganda" and seek the "co-operation of the Ugandan government for this purpose."

The subcommission also adopted a draft resolution requesting an investigation of a Rhodesian attack Aug. 8 on a UN refugee camp in Mozambique. Rhodesia has claimed the camp was a training base for black nationalist guerrillas.

The 32-page report on Chile detailed 23 cases of illegal arrests since the beginning of this year, and alleged the torture of prisoners in several cases.

It also gave particulars of 52 persons arrested since January whom it said had disappeared.

SUN-RIPENED PLUM JAM MADE WITH CERTO LIQUID.

Makes about 11 medium glasses.
4½ cups prepared fruit (about 3 lb fully ripe plums)
7½ cups sugar
½ bottle Certo liquid fruit pectin.

First prepare the fruit—Pit (do not peel) about 3 pounds plums. Cut in small pieces and chop. Add ½ cup water; bring to a boil and simmer, covered, 5 minutes. Measure 4½ cups into a large saucepan.

Then make the jam—Thoroughly mix sugar into fruit. Place over high heat, bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and at once stir in Certo. Skim off foam with metal spoon. Then stir and skim for 5 minutes to cool slightly to prevent floating fruit. Ladle quickly into sterilized glasses. Cover at once with ⅛-inch hot paraffin.

SUN-RIPENED PLUM JAM MADE WITH CERTO CRYSTALS.

Prepare fruit as above using a total of 4 pounds plums and ½ cup water to obtain 6 cups prepared fruit. Measure 8 cups sugar and set aside. Add 1 box Certo crystals to fruit in saucepan. Place over high heat and stir until mixture comes to a boil. Stir in sugar. Bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and continue as above. Makes about 14 medium glasses.

Imbalance of power

AS THE MILITARY CAPACITY of the Soviet Union continues to increase, so does the suspicion that the Kremlin's ultimate aim is the total domination of the Western powers by aggression — or by the fear of it.

In the preface to the new edition of Jane's Fighting Ships, most authoritative publication of its kind, Capt. John Moore, the editor, and one-time deputy chief of British naval intelligence, writes:

"The armament of the new (Soviet) ships and the introduction of carrier-borne aircraft has suggested an extended outlook beyond that of pure defence.

"When in the past a country with few overseas financial or colonial interests has embarked on the building of a considerable fleet, the true aims of the ships concerned have proved to be not only protection of the homeland and the sea lanes of communication that run to it, but also aggressive activities designed to support national policy."

There is no doubt about Capt. Moore's meaning.

It is widely believed that the Soviet Union and the United States, the clearly dominant Western power, have reached what is known as nuclear equilibrium. Their strength in intercontinental ballistic missiles, with the multiple independently targetable warhead, is so well balanced that only in the field of conventional forces is it possible for either side to seek advantage.

Heretofore experts in such matters have concluded that in spite of a numerically greater fleet the Soviet Union did not possess the strike power of the United States naval forces.

A dozen aircraft carriers gave the Americans an advantage. But the Russians are challenging by construction of similar units — something they never before possessed.

On the land and in the air, the Soviet far outweighs the whole of the West in armament. In Europe, the likeliest point of confrontation, Russian manpower is five times greater than anything the North Atlantic Treaty powers can muster. The Red Army's tank regiments are stronger in at least the same proportion. Their air forces vastly outnumber the West's.

NATO's commander-in-chief, General Alexander Haig of the United States, has repeatedly expressed his anxiety over the continuing build-up of the Warsaw Pact strength. At his last Brussels press conference he noted that the new generation of Russian fighter-bombers possessed twice the range of its predecessor and can fly sorties over all of Western Europe.

This indicates, he bluntly concluded, that the Warsaw Pact planners are at least flirting with the idea of "an early and intensive conventional breakthrough in any conflict."

At this moment, British, Belgian, West German and American battle units are on joint manoeuvres in Europe until the end of November. With them, for the first time, is a full division of United States-based air assault troops. They were delivered, along with their 348 giant helicopters, in a massive airlift. This development indicates General Haig's determination to integrate his forces more closely, and to demonstrate the ability to bring in swiftly powerful reserves from overseas.

It is further proof, although none was needed, of his and all of NATO's senior officers' deep concern with the imbalance of conventional forces of the East and West and with the urgent need to reinforce them.

Religion's role

CRIME, WE ARE TOLD, is on the increase everywhere. Even in so strictly disciplined Communist China there is evidence of such a trend. Or it could be that the parades of wrong-doers recently observed are a result of the greater assiduity of the authorities.

On this continent, however, there is no question. Criminals are younger and bolder. The Federal Bureau of Investigation in the United States announced recently that violent crime committed by persons under 18 has risen by 54 per cent in 1975 over the rate of 1970.

There are no comparable Canadian figures, but it is safe to assume that this country is experiencing the same degeneracy, although hopefully on a lesser scale.

Scarcely a day passes that the public is not shocked by reports of brutalities committed by those who are still children.

The case of the murder of 10-year-old Kelly McClain in Vancouver's East End comes to mind. Victim of a dare by teen-age boys, according to police, she was stabbed 47 times as she lay under a blanket in a bathtub in what she believed was a game of hide-and-seek.

Could it be that because the death penalty for murder has been abolished in this country that the crime is no longer abhorrent as it should be to the immature mind? Have the reformers unwittingly invited experiments in murder for fun?

In the face of such appalling possibilities, however remote, it is urgent that some program be devised to maintain the moral balance, to counteract all the various influences which are thought to encourage violence and defiance of the law.

It might not be wholly idiotic to suggest that religion can play a part. It might be that educators should reconsider policy on religious instruction in the school system. It might be that revival of a study of selected Scriptures would benefit teacher as well as pupil, and some good might filter down to parents.

At least the sixth Commandment might usefully be discussed, which, in the New English Bible reads: "You shall do no murder."

Long ride to see it

China's limited television

By DAVID BONAVIA from Hong Kong

Low incomes and political inhibitions continue to hinder the devlopment of television in China, where private ownership of TV sets is still a rarity.

Although color TV is now available in Peking, it has been plagued by technical difficulties, and the capital still only has one channel for both color and black-and-white, in operation for three or four hours every evening.

The emphasis in Chinese TV programs is still heavily political, although more and more documentary films are being produced on technical and scientific subjects.

Miniaturized sets are now being manufactured and sold in China, but their cost is beyond the reach of most families, who prefer to spend their savings on bicycles, sewing machines, watches, synthetic fabrics, radios and foodstuffs. No figures for the number of sets in operation are released.

Standards of program production and presentation have remained very basic since TV was introduced to China with Soviet assistance in 1958. The Cultural Revolution and its aftermath have ensured the dominant role of politics, which sets a natural limit on the type of entertainment offered.

A typical evening's viewing begins at 7 p.m., with a program guide and news. The news broadcasts echo the content of the centrally controlled press and radio services, and they are usually at least 24 hours behind the event.

The lead item is normally one dealing with internal political campaigns or reception of foreign statesmen visiting China. Until Chairman Mao Tse-tung's recent seclusion from foreign visitors, any meeting he had with a visiting dignitary would invariably be featured first.

Before the announcement in June that the chairman would no longer receive foreign statesmen, China-watchers and the Chinese people themselves found the film of his encounters with them an invaluable guide to the state of his health and likely longevity — a matter of great political importance.

However, a certain amount of judicious cutting by the Peking television station made it possible to show the chairman as more vigorous than he really was — for instance, by repeating shots of him shaking hands with visitors from different angles.

The New China News Agency claimed recently that the showing of Chairman Mao on TV was a great inspiration to the Chinese people. It quoted workers, peasants and soldiers as saying: "Each time we see Chairman Mao on the TV screen, we feel a great upsurge of spirit." It is not known how the people will be affected by being deprived of their regular sight of the chairman on TV.

A useful feature of the TV news broadcasts is the feeling they convey about the relative precedence of other top leaders, and their relations with each other. For instance, after the death of former Premier Chou En-lai in February, the TV news clip showed his widow, Mrs. Teng Ying-chao, giving a cool reception to one of the chief mourners — the youthful Shanghai worker-hero and military commissar, Wang Hung-wen.

This impled a foreboding of the coming split between those whose political loyalties had been focussed on Chou and his presumed successor, Teng Hsiao-ing, before the April disturbances in Peking brought about Teng's political disgrace. Wang was believed to be a strong supporter of the "radical" movement which ousted Teng, and which was apparently led by Mao's wife, Chiang Ching.

Chiang Ching, a former actress now in her sixties, apparently has a large say in the programing of Peking television. Several times a week, on average, it screens re-runs of the film versions of "model" revolutionary operas and ballets which she has planned and helped produce.

With the exception of occasional war-films — or imports from Albania and North Korea — this is almost the only type of feature film on Chinese television.

A recent survey of the progress of television put out by the official Chinese news agency noted that it has given prominence to "tremendous changes in Hsiao Chin Chuang village." This small rural community near Tientsin was chosen by Chiang Ching as the experimental site for testing her ideas about culture for workers and peasants. Teng is said to have criticized it severely, to Chiang Ching's displeasure.

The TV service also allows viewers in Peking and the provinces to see concerts which they would be unable to attend — for instance, a performance of Mongolian songs and dances by a troupe from the Inner Mongolian Autonomous Region.

Technical documentaries are also popular. A recent one showed the cultivation and many uses of the lotus plant. Others concentrated on such vital subjects as grain storage and crop-seeding.

However, few Chinese communes have TV sets in large numbers, and this means that peasants would have to walk or cycle after nightfall to watch programs at the commune or production brigade headquarters — in many cases, a journey of several miles. Since the peasants rise at dawn and go to bed early, the rural TV audience is of necessity limited.

The shortage of geniuses

By GWYNNE DYER

Let us now speak disrespectfully of famous men. Why is it that so few national leaders are intellectual giants?

Albert Einstein would probably have smashed his head repeatedly against helicopter doors too, given half a chance, and for all we know Leonardo da Vinci fell over every time he put on roller skates. But still somehow it seems clear that President Gerald Ford, to pick an example at random, is blessed with no more than average intelligence.

Few of those who lead us towards our brave new tomorrows are actually mental pygmies, and some exceptions rise well above the average. Among the current crop of national leaders, Prime Minister Trudeau of Canada and President Giscard d'Estaing of France have not only very considerable intelligence, but a touch of intellectual arrogance, and Chancellor Schmidt of West Germany may be in the same league.

On the other hand, only Lenin and perhaps Khrushchev among Russian leaders in this century have shown any spark of intelligence beyond the ordinary. Japan's and Italy's post-war leaders have been an almost unbroken succession of dreary machine politicians.

There have been clever men in the White House in this century, but not one who qualified as an intellectual genius. There have also been men of quite ordinary intelligence, like Harry Truman and Lyndon Johnson, and a few who may even have fallen below the general average (like the unlamented Richard Nixon, for whose tragicomical machinations Deep Throat once gave the total explanation: "These are not very bright guys.")

If we focus on the U.S. for a moment, another remarkable fact emerges: bright guys did not do best. The men of the greatest intellectual glamor, like Woodrow Wilson and John F. Kennedy, were arguably the biggest catastrophes.

Woodrow Wilson got the United States into the First World War, contributed largely to the disaster of the peace settlement, and failed to persuade Congress to let the United States join his own creation, the League of Nations. Kennedy left behind him an even tenser racial confrontation in the United States, and got the country firmly committed to the Vietnam War. It was the non-intellectual yokel Johnson who actually got the key civil rights legislation passed, and the deplorable Nixon who finally ended U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

Most journalists these days have impressive educational credentials, as do senior civil servants. They value highly what they themselves have, and look for it in national leaders, too: a high degree of formal intelligence, an ability for abstract reasoning of the kind measured in IQ tests. They very often fail to find it in the abundance they require — as in the case of Gerald Ford — and they see this as a grave fault.

It verges on treason to say so publicly, but this is nonsense. High intelligence is a requirement for success in some (mostly abstract) human enterprises, but it ranks fairly low on the list of qualifications for political power. Moreover, having won their power on the basis of other qualities, there is precious little evidence that politicians of higher intelligence use it better than those on or near the average.

There is no mystery in this. The effective exercise of power, like its capture, depends mainly on the political virtues. Those are mainly the skills of personal relationships in a heightened and stylized form. Using his specialized ability to judge people, the successful political leader employs and deploys intellectual as well as technical expertise: speech-writers and foreign secretaries, like campaign managers and generals, are all part of the team.

Hereditary political systems work, after a fashion, because almost everybody has a certain facility with the social skills of humankind. The machinery of state will usually carry along the less skilled rulers. Selective systems have greater efficiency, whether democratic or not, because they actually test potential leaders on the way up: you advance in the system by using the same mainly social and political skills that you will need at the top.

Intelligence only enters into it in the negative sense that there is a bottom limit below which strength of character will not help you. It used to be even lower: in crude numbers, IQ 90 was probably good enough for successful leadership in a primitive society, where the main decisions were simple, and governed by traditional rules. Idi Amin may be less intelligent than two-thirds of the Ugandans whom he terrorizes, but he is tough and brave, persuasive and frightening — all the traditional qualities — so he gets away with it.

In a complex society the decisions are more subtle, and the required level of intelligence rises, but leadership still doesn't require an intellectual giant. If such a genius should have the other required skills, and get the job, he would probably be so bored and frustrated that he would constitute a positive menace. There is nothing wrong with having merely ordinary human intelligence: it is an impressive gift, and quite sufficient to do the job of being a national leader.

I Beg to Differ

Progress in the air

BY FRANK LOWE

The other day, while cleaning out a desk drawer, I came across an airline ticket — and it made me realize what progress had done for me.

This ticket was a recent one, dating back only to last March. At that time my wife and I decided we needed a little sun in our lives.

Well, we did get some sun. But we had to work at it.

To start with, progress has now brought us a new airport. The old airport was only 20 minutes away. This one is an hour's drive. This meant that to get our 10 a.m. flight — and to be there that mandatory one hour before take-off — we had to be up, brisk and cheerful, about 6 a.m.

Anyway, we got to our new airport. It is the very latest in airports. It is so progressive you can't walk to your plane. A mechanical hay cart picks up the passengers and trundles them over several miles of flat terrain to their first destination — the plane.

The one thing was that on this occasion the plane had developed a bad case of stubborness. It was there but it wouldn't move. For several hours we all sat in the motionless great iron bird and stared out the windows.

I don't know how you feel about scenery, but a couple of hours of staring at a snow-covered field leaves me somewhat jaded.

Finally, in a spirit of fellowship and in an effort to keep my fellow passengers from committing homicide, I suggested to the steward that perhaps it would be a nice gesture if he would open the bar. If we couldn't fly in the air, perhaps we could fly on the ground.

The steward said this was against the rules. He couldn't serve drinks while on the ground. I got slightly nasty at that point, and asked who had made the rules — the federal government, the provincial government, the airline, or perhaps the steward himself because he was too damned lazy to serve drinks?

I also pointed out that the rule didn't make sense. If he would call back that mechanical hay cart which had brought us to this unmoving cage set in the middle of nowhere, we could all go back to the airport building and have drinks there. And the airport building was on the ground, wasn't it?

Finally, as other passengers began to join the battle, he gave in and sullenly served drinks. As I was sipping mine, and as I had long ago tired of the view from my window, I began reading some literature put out by the airline.

It told me that the flight I was on, the one which was to take me from Canada's March snows to the Caribbean sun, would take only three hours — thanks to the miracle of the jet aircraft. Ah, progress — let your name be canonized.

But as I read this it occurred to me that this magical three-hour flight had already consumed about six hours of my life — and we still hadn't left the ground. And my mind drifted back to those primitive times, before progress took over, when I had first made this flight.

It was in the late 1940s. The trip to the airport, as I said, was only 20 minutes. Mind you, in the old prop-propelled plane I was then riding, the flight took about six hours. There was no magical, three-hour jet to whisk me from the frigidity of Canada to the balminess of the Caribbean.

So, just for the heck of it, I began to keep score. We had left the house at 8 a.m. It was now slightly past noon. At about 1 p.m., the progressive jet let out a few moans and some 15 minutes later we got into the air.

I must admit the in-flight information was correct, because three hours later we landed at our Caribbean airport. But as we were late we came in during a peak traffic hour and neither the baggage facilities nor the immigration and customs people were equipped to handle such an unexpected load.

If you want to get the chill of a Canadian winter out of your bones, there is nothing to beat hanging around a non-air conditioned Caribbean airport for a couple of hours.

When we were finally unloosed and arrived at our destination, I did not hurl myself into that glorious blue sea lapping at our doorstep. I hurled myself into that glorious soft bed in our bedroom.

Before I dozed off I mentally reviewed my score sheet. Thanks to progress I had spent only three hours in the air. But somehow, as I reckoned it, to achieve this I had also spent more than 12 hours to take part in this modern miracle.

As I drifted into oblivion, I tried to envisage what goodies progress would bring me in the next decade or so. I mean, the people who can turn an old-fashioned, six-hour propeller type flight into a 12-hour jet ride must have more surprises up their sleeves.

Don't you think so?

Major gesture by Western powers

Poland finally regains 'Danzig gold'

By MURRAY SEEGER from Warsaw
The Los Angeles Times

Two tons of fine monetary gold were quietly shipped into Poland in recent weeks to close one of the Second World War's oldest chapters.

Worth perhaps $10 million, the gold has been held in the vaults of the Bank of England and the Federal Reserve Bank of New York since the end of the war. It had belonged to the Free City of Danzig, a political entity which existed between the two world wars.

For the communist government of Poland, receipt of the "Danzig gold" was a major gesture by the Western powers in confirmation that Poland's postwar western border along the Oder River is permanent and legitimate. The old port of Danzig is now the Polish city of Gdansk.

The Poles consider the decision by the quasi-independent Tri-Partite Commission of the United States, Great Britain and France a major success for the Polish policy of trying to expand and improve political and economic ties with the West.

"This action was very significant in our view," said a Polish official who disclosed the transfer of the gold had already taken place.

To the three wartime allies who have had control of the gold, the transfer is "one more step in the process of normalizing relations with Poland," according to a Western diplomatic source.

"U.S.-Polish relations are excellent," a ranking American diplomat commented. "Things just keep getting better. We keep looking for the limits but we haven't hit them yet."

A Polish official said the current good relationship between Warsaw and Washington was a goal which his government was pursuing. He pointed out that U.S. Ambassador Richard Davies was permitted to address the Polish people during prime television time on July 4 to mark the American bicentennial.

On the same day, Communist Party leader Edward Gierek presided at a ceremony officially donating to the United States statues of the Polish heroes, Thaddeus Kosciusko and Casimir Pulaski, who fought in the American revolution.

"Today is a good day to emphasize that relations between the Polish People's Republic and the U.S. are broader and richer and also more friendly than ever in the past," Gierek said. "The Polish People's Republic wants to continue developing those relations."

Diplomatic sources said the decision to return the Danzig gold also was made in July and followed the steady pattern of improved relations between the two countries, linked by a history of friendship predating the communist takeover in Warsaw.

One of the major factors in the improved relationship is the presence in the United States of about 6 million Americans of Polish background.

This large, politically active constituency has responded favorably to Gierek's efforts to relax internal police controls in Poland while opening political and trade connections to the West.

Trade between the United States and Poland is expected to exceed $1 billion this year and to double by 1980. Cultural exchanges between the countries have expanded steadily.

The transfer of the Danzig gold to Warsaw will be a modest contribution towards improving the Poles' credit standing which is suffering because of the rapid rise in debts owed to the West from heavy purchases of machinery and grain.

The Tri-Partite Commission would not directly confirm or deny that the Danzig gold question had been resolved but other diplomatic sources acknowledged that the transfer had taken place.

Poland claimed the gold soon after the war ended and the allied powers had organized the commission to administer seized property captured from Nazi Germany by the Western armies.

In addition to the Danzig gold, the commission held monetary gold stolen from Czechoslovakia and Albania and a national treasure from Hungary — the Crown of St. Stephen, the country's patron saint.

The commission examined all the legal complications to determine the rightful owners for the property. But, in addition, the allied governments have used the bait of the property to negotiate outstanding claims against communist governments which have refused to pay obligations made by pre-war capitalist regimes.

Thus, 20 tons of Czech gold is still held by the commission because one member, the United States, has not yet been able to negotiate a settlement of property claims by American citizens against Czechoslovakia that Congress will approve.

In the case of Danzig, the issues involved in the dispute were both political and economic.

The city, located between the former East Prussia and the pre-war German area surrounding Berlin, was put under League of Nations administration after the Versailles treaty ending the First World War reestablished a Polish state.

Although Danzig had a majority of German residents, Poland was given power to administer its foreign affairs and other local authority to assure the country a Baltic Sea port.

One of Adolf Hitler's first demands against Poland in 1939, which marked the start of the Second World War, was that Danzig be returned to German control and that East Prussia again be directly linked with the main part of the Nazi Reich.

After the Soviet army liberated Poland and established a communist government in Warsaw, the Eastern bloc of nations recognized Poland's western border to be along the line of the Oder and Neisse Rivers and to include a substantial former German area, including mineral rich Silesia.

This was further east than the allies expected to set the new Polish border. For the communists, however, the Oder-Neisse line gave Poland valuable former German lands in compensation for its suffering at the hands of the Nazis, and former Polish land in the east which Stalin received in his 1939 treaty with Hitler.

The allies said the western Polish border could not be set permanently until a peace treaty ending the Second World War was signed. More than 30 years have passed and no such general treaty has been negotiated.

In the intervening years, the new communist state of East Germany accepted the border with Poland while Warsaw's relations with capitalist West Germany were restored slowly.

The Bonn government signed a treaty with Poland in 1970 to begin the process of improving relations. In 1972, former president Richard Nixon visited Warsaw and accelerated a slow process of improvement in Plolish-American relations.

Letters to the editor

Veterans 'robbed'

Acts of robbery always rate a report in the press, so now that the veterans have been "robbed" of their rights at their Veterans' Hospital it all reads as news. The veterans want it back but unfortunately right throughout Canada they do not speak as one voice.

The oldest veterans' organization in the Dominion is the Army, Navy and Air Force of which I was proud to be asked to be founder president of 302. That powerful body, the Royal Canadian Legion, begun after the First World War, claims the most members and welcomes all veterans through its doors.

A veteran's heart swells with pride as he walks into any unit with Kipling's rousing ditties ringing in his ears. A welcome, especially around Armistice Day, Nov. 11, New Year's, bingo, et al.

Over a quarter-century ago we old sweats got together and agreed that good united leadership, speaking for all veterans, in a united voice could put any government in or out. But Mr. Trudeau, aping that other demagogue Hitler, said "divide and conquer." He doesn't want to hear a united veterans' voice speaking throughout the land. Those of us who are still here, nursing our war wounds, will continue taking our eight pills a day to keep alive and while away the passing hours awaiting the inevitable. With Shakespeare we know the "good is oft interred with their bones" and as we pass into oblivion we will leave behind the manoeuvering political parties, both federal and provincial, who will choose their champions such as Dr. Scott Wallace, to support their nefarious schemes.

No matter how you slice it, the taking away of the Veterans' Hospital was ruthless and unadulterated robbery.

CLARENCE GOODE,
Squadron-Leader,
Royal Air Force (Retd.)

Thanks

Many of us would like to give Mr. Hugh Keenleyside a word of thanks for his letter to the editor, Aug. 26. The remarks about the Trojan Nuclear Plant near Portland really opened our eyes as to how we are fooled about the operation of this innocent-looking piece of scenery.

It was admitted that it was the cause of higher temperatures in the Columbia River, but we were assured that would be corrected. Now the talk is to build two more plants just 32 miles below our Canadian border for added energy for Portland and California; and it just doesn't make sense to me, except that the citizens of California don't want them down there.

Here we are, on the San Andreas Fault, and harboring a fleet of nuclear subs and expected to ignore two more plants close to our borders.

We are constantly being told of the dangers of these plants to humanity wherever they are built, but the practise still goes on. I, for one, wish they would be outlawed on a global scale, but perhaps it is too late for that. Why would Mr. Shrum be suggesting this idea for Vancouver Island? He should be tending his classes at UBC.

MRS. G. PEARMAN,
607 Marifield Ave.,
Victoria.

Porter

I do hope that someone is paying attention to Mackenzie Porter's articles on what to do with our convicts. Establish a centre in the north from which place they cannot possibly escape except at the risk of either starvation or freezing to death.

I understand that the Russians, thanks to convicts, have built prosperous communities in Siberia. Wouldn't it be better to help these unfortunate people to find satisfaction in profitable work than keep them in prisons which do more harm than good.

Only stupid people would fail to take advantage of the ideas of others, even if we do not agree with all of their concepts.

MRS. A. M. MECHAN,
102-2768 Satellite Place,
Victoria.

Crystal

May I add one more voice to the very many, I am sure, who wish the Crystal Garden saved from destruction.

I can add little to the views of reader Dorothy H. Carey, who so eloquently expressed all the salient points in support of retaining the structure. There are absolutely no arguments, practical or otherwise, that could support demolition. Money, which it would appear, is behind both the pro and con supporters, can be construed as an "advantage" for those wanting it kept — for money can and always has been raised for a worthwhile project. Conversely, it would appear that the interests behind demolition are interested only in the money to be made from the absence of the structure and the replacement, God forbid, on the land of "another concrete and steel."

Although my views are mostly my own, they reflect the opinions of hundreds that daily frequent our shop. I am also greatly influenced by early fond memories of the Garden and what a pleasure it was to proudly claim it as a distinctive and unique part of Victoria to visitors and tourists. Today those attractions are becoming fewer and fewer.

Please, Victorians, let's try and retain some of our dignity and individuality, and not buckle to selfish interests that would have us believe it's for our own good.

JOHN W. HOPE,
1113 Fort Street,
Victoria.

BNA Act

I am greatly disturbed over the very evident intention of the prime minister, by hook or by crook, to bring the British North America Act to Canada.

Shamefully, I must confess to ignorance as to the exact contents of the act, which perhaps, like the American Declaration of Independence, does not necessarily confer absolute power so much as to deny absolute power to power hungry politicians, seeking power either for prestige or for far more questionable purposes.

Would it be possible for one of your more erudite writers to prepare a summary of the act and possibly promote discussion, regarding the various aspects and the reasons for wishing to bring the act under the jurisdiction of Canadian authorities for publication in your paper?

I consider that this act in denying power to those who would use it for their own ends, is the only safeguard that we, the people of Canada, have.

In the meantime, although time is getting very short with a September 15 deadline, I must register my strongest disapproval of any attempt to tamper with this act unless by and with the authority of every Provincial Legislature and the Parliament of Canada in free and untrammelled debate.

R. B. MORISON,

Landmark

The Castle Preservation Society has received from Mrs. W. R Uhte, 55 Bothin Road, Fairfax, Cal. the following letter:

"On July 10 and 11 we visited your beautiful city, and found ourselves somewhat limited in what we could do, because the use of credit cards was not as widely accepted as we expected.

"We soon ran out of cash, and had 20 cents to spare when we found Craigdarroch Castle.

"My strait-laced husband wandered about outside, while I joined my brash daughter and son-in-law in touring the interior.

"To now make things right, and in appreciation of your society's efforts to preserver your local heritage for future generations, I enclose a small cheque.

"My only regret is that I did not read the brochure before we left, and so I did not see the Schaeffer painting, Mount Tamalpais at Evening, in the library.

"We live very near Mount Tamalpais, and an original painting of this beautiful mountain by George Demont Otis hangs in our living room.

"Thank you for a pleasurable experience."

The cheque was for $8, far above the average donation for four visitors, the average working out to about 25 cents per person.

The Castle Society has written to thank the Uhtes for generosity and encouragement.

GWLADYS M. WELSH,
Secretary,
The Castle Society.

Firemen

I cannot see what the Victoria firemen were arguing about. They claim they were given the same rate of pay as the Vancouver firemen, but that pay was still under arbitration.

Do the Victoria firemen expect to be paid continually what the Vancouver firemen get through their arbitration? This could mean a monthly pay far above the present guidlines, and impossible for the city to pay. It means in effect that Vancouver is setting the wage for the Victoria firemen and the city council is completely impotent.

To say the two cities should pay the same rate is ridiculous.

Vancouver is an industrial city. Sidney Roofing and Sweeney Cooperage are just two large businesses lost by Victoria to Vancouver, Their tax base is far better. On the other hand there are a number of manufacturing plants subject to extensive fire at any time.

Victoria, on the other hand, is mainly composed of homes, high-rises and government buildings. Nor is the area one-tenth of that to protect in Vancouver. Nor do the firemen have to live half as far from work, and people generally consider it an advantage to live on the Island, in Victoria.

So why do the Victoria firemen demand equal pay with Vancouver?

GEORGE CAMERON,
821 Broughton St.,
Victoria.

Workers

I would like to comment on the article concerning industrial democracy in the Monday Magazine of Aug. 27, 1976.

As one of many people who has felt that political support of organized labor has been imperative to ensure dignity and fairness to the working people, I too, have been doing some rethinking about the tools available to the worker.

I respect Mr. Barber's attempts to deal with the very controversial issue of strikes and lockouts. I wonder if the reluctance of the North American working person to give up his right to strike is based upon the lack of a better method to ensure his ability to be treated fairly by his employer? That certainly has been uppermost in my mind when contemplating the economic disaster in which we now live.

Mr. Barber's research and proposals make eminent sense, and I sincerely hope that those of us in the work force will consider thoughtfully the suggestions which Mr. Barber discusses.

Perhaps a concerted effort by both management and labor "to find a better way" for the good of us all will produce a new era in workers' rights and production efficiency. Well done, Mr. Barber.

R. ROLFE,
2601 Penryhn St.,
Victoria.

Think!

Jack Davis and his Socred colleagues have succeeded in beclouding the ferry rate issue by introducing comparative costs of highway travel, and suggesting that the level of subsidization is now about the same.

This gambit ought to be refused by all intelligent participants in the debate.

It is, of course, true that ferry transportation costs more per passenger-mile than some highway transportation does. But it is also true that the cost per passenger-mile differs greatly from highway to highway.

For example, the passenger-mile costs on the Lion's Gate and Second Narrows bridges (serving Davis' constituents) are far greater than on adjoining land highways, both as to capital and operating costs.

Or what about the costs of major highway systems that are not heavily used? Take the Alaska Highway north of Fort Nelson, or that between Lytton and Lillooet.

By Davis-Socred logic, persons driving on those highway systems ought to pay a toll equivalent to the difference between average passenger-mile costs and those obtained on the expensive systems.

Highways Minister Alex Fraser should be invited to calculate the passenger-mile maintenance costs on the Chilcotin Highway and force his constituents to pay the difference. It would be interesting to watch the ensuing political process.

Kelowna and Westbank are joined by a bridge. It would be interesting to discover the difference between capital and maintenance costs on that portion and that of the average Okanagan highway.

There IS a real difference between the examples cited and the ferry systems: More British Columbians who rely primarily on ferry systems returned opposition MLAs to the Legislature. Eight opposition MLAs to only three government MLAs: Barber, Lea, Lockstead, Sanford, Skelly, Stupich, B. Wallace and Dr. Scott Wallace vs. Bawlf, Curtis and Kahl.

Neighbors object to Annette's coffin bed

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Annette Brooks has no intention of changing her sleeping habits or bed — a coffin.

The 17-year-old Cleveland girl has been sleeping in a shiny metal coffin for about a month and for the past two weeks on the front porch of her west side house.

The neighbors don't think much of the idea and about eight of them picketed her.

"It's not right," said Linda Schillo, who along with her husband, Ralph, two daughters and Schillo's brother, Ronald, his wife, Kitty, and some neighborhood children, picketed the Brooks house.

"We don't like it because it's scaring the old people," Mrs. Schillo said.

Miss Brooks, unmoved, jumped into the coffin and looked out at the demonstrators.

"The police said it's not illegal," she said. "I can put it where I want to put it."

Mrs. Shillo said he mother, Jean Jeskie, 60, lives directly behind the Brooks and the coffin disturbs the old woman at night when she walks her cats.

"It's our right to tell her we don't like it and it's her right to have it," Mrs. Schillo admitted.

More than 80 people gathered to catch a glimpse of Miss Brooks in her "bed" and watch the pickets. Cars also stopped and held up traffic until police cleared the street.

The coffin, Miss Brooks said, will go back in her bedroom when the weather gets colder.

Annette, a factory worker, also is waiting until she gets her bedroom just right for the coffin. She intends to set up curtains to showcase the coffin in traditional funeral parlor fashion.

"Right now the hinges are off and there's a few dents in it," she said. "As soon as I get the money for it I'm going to have it repainted black and have the inside done in white satin.

"I wanted to prepare the bedroom. Until I have it refinished I'll just keep it out on the porch."

The coffin was a gift from her stepfather. He had heard her say she wanted one and he happened to know a man who was selling one.

"I sleep in it because I want to," Annette said. "I just wanted to be different. I just wanted to see what it was like to sleep in the coffin."

Annette, a fan of the movies The Exorcist and Omen, said it all started one night when she had some friends over and one wondered aloud what it would be like to lie in a coffin.

"I just decided I wanted one," she said. "I had been reading The Exorcist and I thought it was a good book."

Annette said no one bothers her when she's sleeping on the porch.

"I just crawl in like it's a bed. It's got enough room to toss and turn. It's just something different to have."

Single witness heard in three-day session

The hearing was adjourned until Sept. 23, after three days and only one witness. Much of last week's argument was taken up with determining the exact date when the province expropriated the 60-foot-by-123-foot property owned in 1974 by De Montigny Enterprises Ltd.

Still to be heard, according to arbitrator Eric Charman, a local realtor, are five other witnesses to help the board determine the value of the property included in a government office and parking building under construction on Blanshard.

Boat that wouldn't die

Edmonton visitor Steve Hofforth, 11, gazes at remains of wooden-hulled former B.C. coastal tug Fautless, quietly rotting away in cove on eastern verge of East Sooke Park. Fautless, launched at New Westminster in 1906, was towboat for Pacific (Coyle) Navigation Co. until 1957, when she went to breaker's yard in Victoria for stripping. How she ended in present resting place is a mystery.

Former Royal Roads professor Charles Burchill was presented with an honorary life membership in the World Federalists at the organization's Canadian annual conference in Brantford, Ont.

Burchill, who founded the Victoria branch in 1959, served two terms as president and organized Vancouver and Nanaimo branches before becoming a three-time national president, received the honor for his efforts.

Lottery prizes keep on coming

It's almost getting to the point in the Victoria police and court centre on Fisgard and Centennial Square that a lottery prize is guaranteed by joining a group to buy a ticket.

A group of 15, including persons working in the complex and friends, learned Tuesday that one of the 15 $10 tickets they bought in Sunday's final Olympic lottery came through for a $500 prize.

The odds-shattering string of lottery victories began in February with a $250,000 Western prize for members of the Victoria Police Mutual Benefit Association. Next, in May, 28 persons in the provincial court half of the complex at 625-633 Fisgard won $500 in the Olympic draw.

Third, a second group of 46 court employees and others captured $50 in a Western draw in July. Fourth, the group of 28, who had spent their May $500 on 50 $10 Olympics tickets for the draw last Sunday, cashed in two of the 50 for $100 each.

Sgt. John Burdyny, Victoria police liaison officer in court, shared in the first four groups, but wasn't in the group of 15, which was centred in the prosecution office at 30 Centennial Square.

However, the new lucky group included one policeman who's in the $250,000 bunch and one court employee in both earlier groups of 28 and 46.

All money is being reinvested in tickets for the next Western and first Loto Canada draws, and members of the various groups expect to keep winning forever, the way their luck is going.

Rezoning

The Colonist mistakenly reported in its Tuesday edition that a rezoning application submitted by a local developer and approved by Saanich council was for 26 duplexes in the Fremont Street and Majestic Drive area.

Stable mining urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — A submission by the British Columbia and Yukon Chamber of Mines to the provincial ministers of mines Tuesday calls for a return to stability in the Canadian mining industry and an end to "excessive taxation" and adverse legislation.

The submission, released here in advance of presentation to the 33rd annual conference of mining ministers at St. John's, Nfld., warns other provinces not to duplicate legislation by the former New Democratic Party government in B.C.

The chamber says that as a result of NDP legislation, "the orderly progress of prospecting, exploration-development and mining in B.C. has been badly disrupted."

It says "coercive law and punitive taxation in B.C. during 1973-74 drastically reduced new mining activity," all phases of mining suffered, and the result will not be realized for years to come "despite some remedial legislation" this year. The chamber is made up of those in the exploration field and mine suppliers.

Apart from the government actions in B.C., the brief says mining in Canada has faced more announcements of new policy, new legislation and new regulations in the past decade than is good for its health.

"It is not fallacious to suggest that every prospector and operator when contemplating a project anywhere in the country has been forced to spend an inappropriate amount of time and energy attempting to decipher policy statements" and sorting out regulations, says the brief.

"Significant development periods exist in the exploration and mining industry that require a stability and commitment reaching beyond the term of normal electoral mandates. Therefore, the policies to be developed ... must be realistic and long lasting."

Bullion recovers

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Gold fell to its lowest level in almost three years on the London bullion market at one time Tuesday, but recovered most of the lost ground later on. The pound firmed up but the U.S. dollar registered some progress against most other European currencies.

Gold at one time dived in London to $103.05 an ounce, its worst level since Dec. 4, 1973, but by closing time had rallied to $104.125, only 25 cents under last Friday's closing rate.

'The bricks' for Ford

DETROIT (UPI) — The Ford Motor Co. Tuesday offered its 170,000 workers a 3 per cent pay increase in a new contract. The United Auto Workers promptly rejected it.

"It's the most regressive offer I have been given in all my years of bargaining," an angry UAW President Leonard Woodcock said.

Ken Bannon, the UAW vice-president who heads the bargaining team at Ford, said that if Ford means to hold to its initial money offer, "they are headed for the bricks."

Woodcock warned the company's first money offer lessened chances of a peaceful settlement at Ford, the "target" firm whose union contracts expire at midnight, Sept. 14.

The "target" is the company which the UAW negotiates with. The settlement there usually is followed by the other auto makers.

Ford negotiators termed their offer, with the 3 per cent wage increase, a cost of living protection clause and additional wages for skilled trades employees, "responsible and realistic under the circumstances."

Conversational crutches keep popping up from time to time. At this point in time the big catch phrase is "Compared to what?"

Ask somebody something simple like "How are you?"

You're likely to get that wearing retort "Compared to what?" And then you take it from there.

Ask how the B.C. export lumber business is and you might get the same "Compared to what?"

Compared to last year, shipments through B.C. ports are good. Compared to 1974 and 1973, not so good.

The latest figures from the Pacific Lumber Inspection Bureau, in Seattle, shows that shipments through B.C. ports reached 1.14 billion board feet at the end of July. The total for all of 1975 was only 1.24 billion board feet, with only 893 million shipped by July 31.

In 1974 it was a different story. The yearly total was 2.35 billion with 1.45 billion of it shipped by July 31. The 1973 figures were just as impressive with a total of 2.34 billion.

The prices are a slightly different story. Using the nearest futures prices in Chicago for the sake of comparison (each company makes its own deals with its clients) lumber was selling for $153 a thousand board feet in July of this year. In July, 1975, the figure was $140; in July, 1974 it was $132 and in July, 1973, $140.

Last week's White Paper proposals for the Bank Act revision included one that would see banks playing a larger role in the distribution of corporate securities. And while they could have such securities for sale, drafters of the papers warn that the banks should not actively promote the sale of them — at the same time making it quite clear that they are available. This will be a neat advertising trick.

One of the banks' longtime claims is that their 7,000 branches are located in many small towns where there is no stockbroker available. The investment dealers counter with toll-free numbers to the nearest securities broker.

The day after the White Paper, it became known that a brand new bank, Northland Bank, is offering some of its own shares for sale and not all through an underwriter.

This move, according to the Globe and Mail, may be the first time that a Canadian bank has offered its own shares in such a manner. Of the 859,000 shares to be issued, 210,640 are being sold through the bank directly through authorized trading officials. The major underwriter other than Northland is Midland Doherty with 175,000 shares.

Bank directors are those who have been designated as officials who will handle the sale.

Northland had to get approval and registration as a security issuer in Alberta, B.C., Saskatchewan and Manitoba to be able to offer the shares. Those are the only provinces where they can sell them.

Credit unions and co-operatives in the four provinces are behind this bank, which has stated as its aim to make loans of between $200,000 and $2 million to small industries, farmers, etc.

The bank says that its idea behind the sale of its own shares is to allow members of credit unions and co-ops, rather than just the organizations alone, to purchase the shares. A considerable number of those members, especially in rural areas, have not had dealings with brokers.

Canada rich? We owe plenty

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada is not as rich as some people believe it to be, Allen Lambert, chairman of the Toronto Dominion Bank, said Monday.

"We owe tremendous amounts abroad," Lambert said prior to attending a bank directors' meeting.

The bank's 28 directors were in the city for a regular board meeting and to officially open the bank's new Alberta headquarters in the Edmonton Centre.

"We have been living well—too well perhaps," Lambert told reporters. "We still think we are rich but we are heavily in debt."

Canada is rich in opportunity but this can only be converted to useful wealth through hard work, he said.

The major reason for Canada's large debt is that "we have been trying to do too many things too quickly."

He said borrowing is necessary for major projects, such as pipelines and power generating stations, and this need not be a problem because the project eventually pays back the investment.

"But we can't afford to borrow abroad to sustain our standard of living," he said. Municipal and provincial governments borrow abroad to finance public works while the federal government uses deficit financing to introduce additional social welfare programs.

Wheat deal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Soviet Union has ordered another quarter of a million metric tons of America's 1976 wheat crop in a deal valued at $34.6 million, federal officials announced Tuesday. The spokesman said Soviet grain orders for the 1976-77 season now include 1.971 million metric tons, or 72 million bushels.

Shale oil battle settled

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Robertson, president of Skaist Mines Ltd., said Monday the company's legal counsel has received a formal letter of settlement from the provincial Department of Mines and Petroleum Resources in a legal battle over oil shale leases in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

The fight began last year when the then New Democratic Party administation enacted legislation which placed oil-bearing shale under the control of the Petroleum Act and removed it from the Minerals Act.

Skaist had obtained claims under the Minerals Act and the company had applied for and was refused two permits in June, 1975.

The company followed with a law suit against the provincial government for damages and for exemption from the effects of the amended legislation.

Under the terms of the settlement, the Department of Mines and Petroleum Resources will issue the two permits for which Skaist applied and both parties will pay their own costs in the action.

Robertson said the company has reapplied for the permits and has resumed negotiations with several major resource-oriented companies which, he said, had expressed interest in the B.C. oil shale project.

AMC

Warranty plan stronger

TORONTO (CP) — American Motors Corp., fighting back from slumping auto sales, introduces an extended warranty plan Tuesday in hopes of improving its customer appeal.

Chairman William Lunenburg told a news conference held Tuesday to unveil AMC's 1977 models that the plan applies both in Canada and the United States.

The company is providing full coverage for two years or 24,000 miles on its car engine and drivetrain, an extension to its present warranty for 12 months or 12,000 miles.

"In other words, we are the only U.S. manufacturer to back its cars with free repair of any defective part on the car for 12 months or 12,000 miles, and of any defective engine or drivetrain part for a full two years or 24,000 miles," he said.

The warranty applies to all 1977 and unsold 1976 passenger cars, Lunenburg said. He refused to say whether there will be a price increase in 1977 vehicles.

Petrofina halts plan

EDMONTON (CP) — Petrofina Canada Ltd. confirmed Tuesday it has halted plans to develop an oil sands project in northeastern Alberta.

P. A. Nadeau, company president, said in the firm's semi-annual report to shareholders decision was reached with its associates "to suspend any further activities and expenditures" for the time being.

Petrofina and its partners Pacific Petroleums Ltd., Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas and Murphy Oil, were involved in the Alberta Oil Sands Project to develop a 100,000-barrel-a-day oil sands plant on a 54,000-acre site about 42 miles north of Fort McMurray.

PROVINCIAL COURT

When someone who has been sentenced to an intermittent jail term wants to clean up the last part of it through straight time, it may be impossible to make the change because Parliament hasn't given anyone the legal power to do so.

That's what came out of the case Tuesday in Victoria provincial court of Randall Peter Ginger, 26, of 589 Walter, Saanich, who appeared before Judge William Ostler in the main criminal-court section to ask for such a change.

Statements by Ginger and prosecutor Robert Mulligan showed Ginger was sentenced late in April by Judge Harold Alder to 88 days for trafficking in marijuana. Ginger didn't ask for an intermittent term but Alder ordered one to preserve Ginger's job.

Since then, Ginger had left the job and had served more than 40 days. He had about 20 days to go after the deduction of "good time" and wants to serve them in a row and get the sentence over with.

Ostler said he could not make the change because another judge set the sentence. He added he believed the other judge couldn't, either, because sentences in such cases cannot be altered once committal papers are signed.

He said he thought the jail officials were the only ones who might be able to make the change but "all I can do" is suggest Ginger make a formal request to Alder, who returns from holiday next week.

"Police officers in the proper execution of their duty are not to be demeaned or treated in this manner," Ostler told Koksilah resident Alfred Modeste, 48, who was fined $500 after pleading guilty to a Sidney charge of assualting a peace officer.

Prosecutor Armand Petronio said Modeste was a passenger in a van whose driver was hurt when it braked July 6 for a spot check by police on the Patricia Bay Highway. Modeste, who thought mistakenly that police had not called an ambulance, punched one constable and wrestled him into a ditch.

Ostler said higher courts have declared such offences should usually earn a jail term but Modeste had been drinking and was confused and anxious because of his friend's injury.

Ostler said only the fact that Suzanne Mae Harvey, 22, of 626 Gorge, had a six-month child prevented him from sending her to jail.

She pleaded guilty Aug. 11 to a two-count Victoria charge of false pretences laid after two worthless cheques were written in July to obtain items worth about $130. At the time, she was on probation for a similar offence.

The judge extended her probation by one year starting Tuesday, ordered repayment of the $130 and told Ms. Harvey she must do 150 hours of community work.

A fine of $250 was imposed by Ostler against Herbert Friesen, 41, of 2622 Prior, who pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of theft involving less than $200.

William Robert Smith, 26, of 1275 Centre, pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of possession of marijuana Aug. 15 at his residence and was fined $250 by Oslter. Prosecutor Sheryl Dunn said police found 54 marijuana plants ranging from three inches to three feet high.

Clive Edward Haas, 21, and Gregory Allen Searle, 19, both of 232 Burnside West, waived preliminary hearing on a joint charge of possession of marijuana Aug. 21 in Saanich for the purpose of trafficking. Ostler then ordered a higher-court trial of the charge. Each man is free until trial on $500 surety bail.

Ostler set Dec. 22 as preliminary hearing date for Manuel Braga, 36, of 1328 Vining, on a two-count Victoria charge dated July 23 of intent to wound through causing bodily harm to a Victoria woman "by cutting her with a knife" and of unlawfully setting fire to a chesterfield on his property in a manner likely to cause a building to catch fire. Braga chose trial by judge and jury and is free on bail until Dec. 22.

David Edmund Fredette, 17, no fixed address, chose trial in provincial court on two Saanich charges — one of an Aug. 20 break-in and theft and one of possession Aug. 22 of a known stolen car. Fredette, who was earlier refused bail on the possession charge, pleaded not guilty and had his trials set for Sept. 9.

In traffic court, Scott Walter Fellner, 23, of 2542 Bowker, pleaded guilty to an Oak Bay charge of impaired driving May 18 and was sentenced by Judge Blake Allan to a 14-day intermittent jail term plus a $200 fine or another 14 days if the fine is not paid.

Victorian named to board

D. W. Metcalfe of 640 Fernhill, Esquimalt, employed at Yarrows shipyard, is member of Toastmasters International and founding member of the local UOA chapter.

The association helps those who have had colostomy, ileostomy or urostomy surgery caused by disease, birth defects or injury. There are approximately 1.5 million ostomates in North America with more than 100,000 new ones added annually.

Ostomy surgery requires the creation of an opening on the abdomen for elimination of body wastes because of loss of normal bowel or bladder functions.

Metcalfe, who is also regional co-ordinator for the northwest region of North America, will help establish and assist local chapters of the 28,000 member non-profit Paramedical Service Organization which has more than 400 chapters.

Hays reported quitting to halt scandal probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Representative Wayne Hays has decided to quit Congress shortly, in a move that might stop House investigation of the Elizabeth Ray sex scandal, a source close to him said Tuesday.

"Hays feels the constant press attention to his case and continuing investigations are ruining his wife's health," the informant said. "I get the impression he will announce his resignation before the end of this week."

A Hays aide would say only that resignation "is under consideration."

The Ohio Democrat, 65, last month abandoned his bid for re-election to a 15th term and announced he would retire at the end of this term to escape the relentless publicity and personal pressures caused by Miss Ray's allegations he maintained her as his mistress on the public payroll.

The word that Hays meant to resign followed Monday's unanimous decision by the House ethics committee to pursue its inquiry into Miss Ray's charges.

She says Hays put her on the federal payroll at $14,000 a year to serve only a his mistress. Hays admits they had an affair before his marriage in April, but maintains he hired Miss Ray to do legitimate staff work.

An ethics committee source said that once a member resigned, the panel no longer had the power to investigate his conduct. There was speculation that the committee was trying to pressure Hays into resigning.

Speaker Carl Albert said he had no information on the resignation. He said Monday that Hays' attorney had told him his client was too depressed to defend himself before an ethics probe.

Hays, whose political career was ruined by the Ray allegations, left Washington Aug. 11 and has since been with his wife at their Ohio farm. Mrs. Hays is convalescing from minor surgery, and the source close to the Ohio congressman said the sex scandal allegations had caused her great emotional strain.

Hays' resignation, in any case, would not stop a grand jury probe of the Ray charges which has been going on for nearly four months. The issue there is whether Hays misused federal funds.

Regardless of whether he resigns now or finishes out his term in January, Hays could receive a federal pension of $30,240 a year, toward which he has contributed at a rate of eight per cent of his salary.

Miss Ray said in New York that she had hoped Hays would serve out his term. "He's suffered enough," she said.

Lebanon protests Russian support

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Lebanese embassy released Tuesday a protest note it sent to the Soviet government describing Palestinian forces in Lebanon as "fascists," "SS" and foreign aggressors.

The note was in protest to an Aug. 26 Tass statement from the Soviet Committee of Solidarity with Afro-Asian Nations supporting the Palestinians in Lebanon.

The note was sent to the Middle East desk of the Soviet foreign affairs ministry and its contents were released to reporters Tuesday.

It said the Lebanese described by the committee as "the forces of Lebanese reaction" were no more reactionary than the Russians who fought Adolf Hitler in the Second World War and the "fascists" were the Palestinians who, instead of fighting Israel, started a barbarous war to become masters of Lebanon.

A Pravda article Sunday called on Syria to withdraw its troops from Lebanon.

The note said Syrian troops had intervened "at the request of the legal Lebanese authorities, just as the American and British allies came to the aid fo the Soviet people during the Hitler war."

Referring to the seizure of the Palestinian Tal Zaatar camp, the note alleged the camp was a "mini-Palestinian state," where Palestinians had tortured and executed hundreds of Lebanese since 1968, and which became a training ground for international terrorists, including Japanese, Germans and Latin Americans.

The note said the "SS Palestinians" killed hundreds of unarmed civilians at Damour in a way the Nazis has not acted in the Soviet Union, nor the Israelis against the Palestinians.

Libyan 'plots' rapped

CAIRO (UPI) — The Al Ahram newspaper Tuesday accused the Soviet Union of encouraging Libyan Leader Col. Moammar Khadafy's "conspiracies" against Arab countries and asked whether Libya has become "a Soviet protectorate."

(Khadafy, meanwhile, in an interview with the Paris daily Le Monde, warned that Egyptian president Anwar Sadat was "playing with fire" by sending troop reinforcements to the Libyan frontier.

("It is clear that the behavior and the declaration of Sadat are those of a madman," Khadafy told Le Monde. "Nothing justifies his warmongering, except perhaps the critical situation he faces in his country.")

In an editorial, Al Ahram commented on an article in the Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda Monday which underlined Moscow's support for Libya in its escalating rift with Egypt.

"In urging those whom it described as progressive forces to support the rulers of Libya, Pravda actually was making a dangerous call," Al Ahram said.

"It was encouraging Khadafy's behavior which is based on conspiracies against Arab countries, giving refuge to terrorists and killers and using them to carry out assassinations and acts of anarchy and terror," the newspaper said.

Israel avoids air strike

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — The Israeli government ordered 1,200 civil aviation employees to work and averted a strike at Tel Aviv's Ben Gurion International Airport.

Employee representatives said the order from the transport ministry would be honored.

RCMP-boat pullout has council miffed

By FRED CURRIE
Colonist Correspondent

NANAIMO—The commanding officer of the Nanaimo RCMP detachment, Inspector George Strathdee, is going to be asked to explain to city council why the police boat Athabasca is being pulled out of Nanaimo.

Ald. Jim Moffat said Monday that he has learned that the 33-foot vessel will be transferred to the Sunshine Coast area of the mainland — Sechelt and Powell River — and will not likely be replaced here.

To make matters worse, Moffat said, he has learned that next summer, the Canadian Coast Guard's Zodiac and crew will not be posted to Nanaimo, as has been the case for the past several years, but, instead, will go to Northwest Bay near Parksville.

The need for full-time rescue service here was pointed up by figures Moffat released. He said that between the coast guard and members of the Nanaimo Emergency Program, 70 marine rescue incidents have been recorded to date this year.

In addition, radio station CHUB has compiled 23 incidents on the water this summer in its marine patrol vessel.

Withdrawal of both the RCMP and coast guard vessels will leave Nanaimo with only the volunteer services of the NEP and the casual participation of radio station personnel on an unofficial basis.

Moffat said that if the situation cannot be reversed, then council should make an all-out effort to have the coast guard station and a large, ocean-going rescue vessel in Nanaimo.

The alderman added that an unofficial count puts the number of all types of boats operating out of Nanaimo at 26,000.

Ald. Gino Sedola, head of the police, parking and traffic committee, has been empowered by council to begin the investigation immediately.

Oceanography ship restarting Voodoo Sept. 13

The search for the Voodoo jet aircraft which crashed into the sea near Comox July 5, killing two men, will be reopened Sept. 13

The Esquimalt-based oceanographic vessel Endeavor will begin the search using echo-sounding equipment, side-scan sonars and other gear.

An armed forces spokesman at Comox said Tuesday the search will pose "a very, very difficult task because the wreckage lies on a tidal edge and the bottom is sand and silt."

The CF-100 jet interceptor crashed into Georgia Strait waters about two miles northeast of the Canadian Forces Base at Lazo.

The wreckage is lying in about 400 feet of water off Cape Lazo

The body of the pilot, Capt. Leslie Cox, 31, formerly of Ottawa, was never recovered. The body of the navigator, Capt. Roy Smith, 29, of Kelowna, was found shortly after the crash.

The plane was taking part in a formation-flying exercise with two other jets when it suddenly plummetted into the calm waters of the strait

Many of the eyewitnesses have been interviewed and an appeal has gone out for anyone else witnessing the crash to contact the Comox base.

Tree faller not blamed for death

A coroner's jury in Central Saanich ruled Tuesday that the owner of a tree-service firm was not to blame for the Aug. 12 death of one of his employees.

The jury of six men found fault with the youth, William Eugene Morgan, 17, for straying into the area where an alder tree was being felled by his employer, Donald Cowie, 49, of Sidney.

Morgan died instantly when the butt of the alder tree shot backwards and struck him in the chest. Death was attributed to shock and hemorrhaging from multiple fractures and internal injuries

Michael Severn, an inspection supervisor with the Worker's Compensation Board, told the jury that Cowie failed to provide proper written or verbal instructions on logging or falling regulations, failed to provide a hard hat, and didn't make proper side-cuts and under-cuts in the alder.

Total war declared on Jews

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — A group calling itself the Argentine National Socialist Front declared total war Tuesday against Jews and claimed responsibility for recent bombing of synagogues and Jewish-owned shops.

It claimed responsiblity for bomb explosions last Thursday that heavily damaged two synagogues in Buenos Aires and a drug store in a Jewish neighborhood of Barrio Once.

That same day, security guards dismantled a dynamite charge placed outside the building housing La Opinion, a Buenos Aires newspaper owned by Jacobo Timerman, who is Jewish.

Ferry strike is averted

SEATTLE (AP) — Basic agreement on a new one-year contract resulted in cancellation of a strike threat by the Washington State Ferries engineers, union officials said Tuesday.

The Marine Engineers Beneficial Association had set a strike deadline of midnight Monday night.

Union spokesman William Henry said the 103 engineers went along with a union official's recommendation to accept a 12-per-cent pay increase, with cost-of-living adjustments Oct. 1 and April 1.

Palmer needs help but earns 19th victory

Jim Palmer continues to be the winningest pitcher in the American League.

The Baltimore star notched his 19th victory Tuesday as the Orioles edged the Kansas City Royals 4-3. Palmer 19-11, ran his record to 13 wins in 17 decisions since mid-June as he gave up single runs in the first and seventh innings before running into trouble in the eighth when three singles by the Royals brought in their third run. Dyar Miller, who came on in relief, retired Hal McRae for the final out of the inning.

For Kansas City it was their second straight loss to Baltimore and blocked their bid to increase their lead over second-place Oakland in the western division.

Royal Howell drove in three runs, including the winner, and Tom Grieve belted a two-run homer as Texas Rangers beat Boston 8-3.

It was the Rangers ninth victory in 11 meetings between the clubs this year.

In a twi-night doubleheader, Milwaukee and Minnesota split, the Brewers winning the second game, 6-3 after Minnesota had captured the opener, 4-0.

Cincinnati Reds and Los Angeles Dodgers continued their winning ways in the National League.

Singles by Pete Rose, bidding for another 200-hit season, and Ken Griffey highlighted a five-run rally in the seventh inning as the Reds edged the St. Louis Cardinals 6-5. The Reds, snapping a three-game losing streak against the Cards, erupted in the seventh against southpaw Pete Falcone, 11-12, who held them hitless until Rose singled with two out in the sixth.

Falcone, who walked four, opened the door by walking Tony Perez after fanning Johnny Bench for his seventh strikeout. Dave Concepcion singled and Cesar Geronimo doubled, Perez scoring. After pinch-hitter Dan Driessen walked, Rose singled home Concepcion and Griffey followed with a two-run single.

Lefthander Doug Rau combined with reliever Charlie Hough for a six-hitter as the Dodgers turned back Montreal Expos, 5-1.

Rau boosted his record to 13-10, going seven innings and giving up all six Montreal hits, including a pinch hit home run by Andre Thornton, his 11th of the year, leading off the seventh.

Los Angeles grabbed a quick lead in the first inning on a two-run double by Bill Russell after Dave Lopes and Bill Buckner led off with singles. In the eighth, a pinch hit single by Reggie Smith scored Lee Lacy. Lacy had led off with a single, was sacrificed to second base and took third on Steve Yeager's single.

The Dodgers added two more runs in the ninth inning.

Bates topple first two rivals in quest for another crown

The B.C. champions scored two victories Tuesday in the opening-round action, defeating Uranium City, N.W.T., Steelers, 5-2, and Lethbridge Miners, 8-0, to take the early lead in the tournament's Red Division.

Third-baseman John Green, most valuable player in the recent B.C. playoffs, cracked two hits, drove in a run and scored a run for Bates in the opening game and catcher Bob Burrows contributed two doubles.

Dave Ruthowsky scattered six hits in earning the victory. He struck out six batters.

In the evening game, centrefielder Reg Underwood was the slugging hero, belting a pair of triples and a single and scoring three runs. The hardhitting outfielder came around to score on each of the triples as the Alberta club committed errors on each play.

Leftfielder Norm McLeod, added by Bates for the week-long championship, cracked a leadoff home run in the fourth inning to cap the scoring.

Bates provided Andy Konopacki with a big cushion, scoring three runs in the first and third innings and a single run in the second, and the fireballing righthander struck out nine batters while allowing only two hits.

Bates, who went on to earn a share of the world championship after winning the national title in 1975, will meet Dartmouth Dairy Queen of Nova Scotia this afternoon at 3:30 Victoria time and manager Joe Patterson is expected to start the third member of his pitching corps, Stan "The Colonel" Kern.

In other action Tuesday, Saskatoon blanked New Brunswick All-Stars, 2-0, and crushed Manitoba All-Stars, 11-2, to take the Blue Division lead.

And Laval Renaud of Gatineau, Que., came up with the day's outstanding individual performance, hurling a no-hit, no-run game to power Quebec to a 10-0 decision over Charlottetown. Renaud issued two bases on balls in facing only two extra batters.

In the day's only extra-inning action, Toronto Globals, the Ontario champions, went nine innings before topping Manitoba, 4-2. Pete Landers, a member of Bates in the drive to the world championship at Lower Hutt, N.Z., earned the victory, relieving starter Reg Martins in the sixth inning.

And Niagara Falls Dugouts blanked Argentia, (Nfld.) Seals, 6-0, with Steve Atkinson, a member of Birmingham Bulls of the World Hockey Association, blasting a homer and triple for the host team for the tournament.

In the last game of the night, Keith Jollimore and Cliff Surrett combined on a one-hitter as Dartmouth humbled the Yukon All-Stars, 12-0. Gerald Dickey drove in five runs for Nova Scotia with a double and a homer.

Round-robin play continues until Saturday afternoon when the top two teams from each division will enter the double-knockout championship round.

The championship round concludes with three, and if necessary, four games on Sunday.

Interception preserves win

EDMONTON (CP) — Linebacker Dale Potter intercepted a pass deep in his own territory with 64 seconds remaining and saved a 5-1 victory Tuesday night for Edmonton Eskimos over Hamilton Tiger-Cats in a Canadian Football League interlocking game.

Garry Lefebvre punted the ball out of danger three plays later and the Eskimos ended a string of successive losses at two.

Dave Cutler handled all the scoring for Edmonton with a 37-yard field goal in the second quarter and singles of 16 and 31 yards in the last half.

Ken Clark opened scoring for the Tiger-Cats midway through the second quarter when a 25-yard field goal attempt went wide for a single before a crowd of 25,461, which had little opportunity to get excited.

The victory boosted Edmonton into a tie with Saskatchewan Roughriders for first place in the Western Conference while Hamilton remained in the Eastern Conference cellar.

Most of the excitement — until the last few minutes — was provided by Edmonton's Joe Hollimon, when he scooted 94 yards with Clark's long punt for an apparent touchdown, but the gain was nullified by a holding penalty.

Both starting quarterbacks, Tom Wilkinson of Edmonton and Jimmy Jones of the Tiger-Cats, were relieved after the half. Bruce Lemmerman took over for the Eskimos and Rick Cassata operated the Hamilton offence.

Cassata, a former Ottawa Rough Rider, called only three running plays in the last half for a net gain of two yards.

A strong Hamilton defence left Cassata in good field position several times but he failed to provide the touchdown that would have meant victory.

Several passes were dropped and Edmonton's John Farlinger recovered a fumble midway through the fourth quarter to halt a drive.

In his first game back after an eight-month recovery from a knee injury, Edmonton halfback Roy Bell rushed for 39 yards in 11 carries.

Salmonbellies regain series lead

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — New Westminster Salmonbellies defeated Vancouver Burrards, 13-9, to take a 3-2 lead in the Western Lacrosse Association final series in a game played before 3050 fans Tuesday night.

Salmonbellies led by 5-3 at the end of the first period and 9-6 after 40 minutes.

New Westminster led by five goals at one point in the third period and never let up.

Salmonbellies outshot Vancouver 52-34 as the Burrards were held in the game by the sharp netminding of Dave Evans, who stopped 39 shots.

Bill Rawson, Dave Litzenberger, Bill Foote and Taki Vohalis scored the other Burrad goals.

Sixth game of the series will be played in Richmond on Thursday. The series winner advances to the best-of-seven Mann Cup final against the Ontario Lacrosse Association champion.

Golfers in select field boast 269 tour wins

The 16 players who make up the field in the Lady Scott Invitational golf tournament to be held at the Victoria Golf Club Sept. 13-14 have scored a total of 269 tour victories in professional golf.

Leader in this category with 84 wins is 64-year-old Sam Snead who still appears regularly on the U.S. tour. Snead won his first professional tournament — the Virginia Closed Professional in 1936. His record since that time is like a road map of the professional tour, as he has won tournaments from coast-to-coast including the Masters and the Canadian Open, but never the U.S. Open.

The Lady Scott Invitational will pair teams of ladies and men in a 36-hole medal competition with the scores of each partner to be added together for the team total. The tournament features eight of the top men seniors and a like number of top pros from the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.

The pairings are: Donna Caponi Young and Tommy Bolt; Pat Bradley and Art Wall; Jocelyne Bourassa and Julius Boros; Mary Bea Porter and Doug Sanders; Sandra Post and Bob Rosburg; Laura Baugh and Sam Snead; Carol Mann and Mike Souchak; and Jan Stephenson and Stan Leonard.

Leading tournament winner among the ladies is the personable Carol Mann, who has captured 38 titles and lifetime earnings of more than $400,000 in a career that began in 1961. Among them are the Ladies U.S. Open and four titles last year.

Second in total number of titles won among the men is Vancouver's Stan Leonard with 42. Among his accomplishments in a relatively short tour career were 1958 Tournament of Champions, 1957 Greensboro Open and the 1961 Western Open. As well he played in 12 Masters tournaments twice finishing just two strokes behind the winner; twice was the individual winner in nine appearances in the World Cup; the World Golfer of the Year in 1959 and six times represented Canada in the Hopkins Team Trophy matches. He is now director of Golf at the Desert Island Golf Club in Palm Springs, Calif.

The tournament offers a total purse of $45,000 with the winning pair to split $10,000.

Tickets, which are $6 daily or $10 for the two days, are available at all local golf clubs.

Hockey league adopts new playoff format

By STAN COOPER

Most training camps don't open for a week or so but Western Canada Hockey League clubs are already considering playoffs.

League governors met this week in Calgary and came up with a formula for post-season play in addition to making a number of key decisions regarding the 12-team major junior league.

Nine teams — the top three in each of the Coast, Central and Eastern Division — will advance to the first round, which consists of a double round-robin series in each division to eliminate one club.

The two remaining teams then play a best-of-seven series with the club having the highest points total in league play having the odd-game advantage.

The three division winners move to double round-robin series to eliminate one club and the remaining two play a best-of-seven set to decide the league representative in the Memorial Cup finals, to be played in May at Vancouver's Pacific Coliseum.

Last season, 10 of the 12 teams were involved in a cumbersome playoff series and many clubs are reported to have suffered financial losses.

In other matters, the governors turned down a request from four clubs — including the Cougars — to increase the number of 20-year-old players to a maximum of two from one per team; the league will shortly hire a referee-in-chief; a committee was formed to look into expansion sites, and officials for the upcoming four-team international tournament in Alberta were named.

Cougars, New Westminster, Brandon Wheat Kings and Kamloops had asked that the matter of "over-age" players be re-considered but the governors voted 8-4 to stick with the maximum of one 20-year-old.

Ernie "Punch" McLean of New Westminster has been named coach and Del Wilson of Regina Pats will manage the WCHL entry in the four-team tournament which includes representatives from the Ontario Hockey Association major series, the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League and the Soviet Union.

League-president Ed Chynoweth is handling tournament details and will announce sites and dates of games shortly. Games will be played in Calgary, Edmonton, Medicine Hat and Lethbridge in late December.

Cougar manager-coach Pat Ginnell said Tuesday he expects the team will be picked in November and will be the strongest possible club. In the 1974 world junior tournament, the WCHL team was composed of two players from each of the 12 teams.

Ginnell expects about 75 players to report to Cougar training camp at G. R. Pearkes Arena on Sept. 7 and he will again supply all players for Nanaimo Clippers of the B.C. Junior Hockey League and again send about six players to Prince Albert Raiders of the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League.

Wendy stubborn test for world champion

TORONTO — Wendy Barlow of Victoria was eliminated from the Canadian international junior tennis tournament Tuesday after dropping a 3-6, 7-5, 6-3 decision to Eva Pfaff of Germany, the world hard-court champion in the under-18 division.

Nicole Marois of Quebec City, the Canadian junior under-18 champion, defeated Japanese champion Yoshie Watanabe 6-0, 6-2 to advance to today's quarter-final action

In the boys under-18 division, Martin Lachapelle of Montreal and Colin McAlpine of Deep River, Ont., were ousted in straight sets, Lachapelle losing a 6-3, 6-1 decision to Ricardo Ycaza of Ecuador and McAlpine bowing 6-1, 6-0 to Jose Clerc of Argentina.

U.S. gets lift from rally despite loss

MONTREAL (CP) — The young United States entry in this month's Canada Cup hockey tournament got more than a little lift Tuesday night in their loss against the Soviet Union.

Trailing 5-1 with just over three minutes to play, the U.S. came back with three goals, including two in a 23-second span but lost 5-4 to the Soviets.

"That comeback is going to help us a lot," said forward Steve Jensen, who was a standout for the U.S. Olympic team earlier this year.

Aleksandr Golikov's power-play goal at 1:37 of the third proved to be the winner, giving the Russians the margin they needed to offset the late U.S. surge.

Vladimir Repnev with two, Vladimir Vikulov and Vladimir Kovin scored the other goals for the Soviets before 12,699 fans. Alan Hangsleben with two, Curt Bennett and Gary Sargent scored for the United States.

Bennett, from the National Hockey League's Atlanta Flames and Sangent from the NHL's Los Angeles Kings, scored 23 seconds apart to out the Soviets lead to 5-3 late in the final period and Hangsleben, of New England whalers of the World Hockey Association, scored with 15 seconds remaining for the final goal of the night.

The Soviets fired 34 shots at American goaltender Mike Curran, who was outstanding all evening, while the U.S. had 21 at veteran Viktor Zinger.

The first period featured chippy, dirty play as both teams concentrated more on slashing, high sticking and hooking than finesse passing plays.

Referee Ove Dahlberg of Sweden was lenient, assessing just four minors to each team and a misconduct to Repnev for protesting a hooking call to Sergei Kapustin.

Team Canada cuts roster today

Bobby Clarke
. . . named captain

MONTREAL (CP) — There will be disappointment today for six of the 31 players currently attending the Canadian training camp in preparation for the six-country Canada Cup hockey tournament which begins in Ottawa Thursday.

Canada and Finland meet in the Ottawa opener

The disappointment will come when the Canadian squad trims its roster to 25 men, the maximum number of players allowed for the tournament which includes teams from the United States, the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Finland and Sweden. As it stands, each team will be allowed to dress only 20 players, including two goaltenders, for each game.

Three of the players in camp appeared assured — barring injury — of a spot on the Canadian team.

Sam Pollock, general manager of Montreal Canadiens and managing director of the Canadian entry in the tournament, said Tuesday that centre Bobby Clarke of Philadelphia Flyers has been appointed captain, a post similar to the one he holds with his National Hockey League club, while defenceman Denis Potvin of New York Islanders and left winger Bobby Hull of the World Hockey Association Winnipeg Jets have been appointed assistants.

Pollock said today's busy schedule likely would mean the announcement of the six players dropped would not come before he club's arrival in Ottawa tonight

The Canadian squad ran through a full workout Tuesday after trimming the world amateur champion Czechoslovakian team 7-4 in an exhibition Monday night, a performance that Pollock described as "satisfying."

But Orr was back at practice Tuesday and Pollock said he will play against the Finns Thursday. He said a back problem suffered by right-winger Danny Gare of Buffalo Sabres, which kept him on the sidelines Monday, did not appear serious.

Pollock said that all six teams will be present at a luncheon in Toronto today and that the Canadian squad will then fly directly to Ottawa. He said the roster reduction could be determined after the Toronto lunch, but more than likely it would be announced in Ottawa after the team management and coaches Scotty Bowman of the Canadiens, Al MacNeil of Nova Scotia Voyageurs, Don Cherry of Boston Bruins and Bobby Kromm of the Jets, have had an opportunity to speak to the players involved.

He declined to speculate on which players could be dropped from the squad, while the athletes were sharply divided in their opinion whether past performance or output at the rugged three-week camp would be the determining factor.

One of four goaltenders, two of eight defencemen and three forwards must be pared.

Familiar officials seek assignments

MONTREAL (CP) — Some familiar names are listed on the roster of officials for the Canada Cup international hockey tournament which gets under way Thursday in Ottawa.

Yuri Karandin, one of two Soviet Union officials who worked an eight-game tour of two Soviet club teams last winter, is on the list of 23 officials who are trying for spots on the 18-man officiating roster

Gordon Lee of the United States and Ove Dahlberg of Sweden, who officiated during the 1972 eight-game series between Canada and the Soviet Union and Valentin Nikultsev, a linesman used during the 1974 Team Canada-Soviet series, are also at the training camp.

Bruce Hood, the senior referee in the National Hockey League and Bill Friday, the World Hockey Association's top referee, are also on hand for the camp.

Four NHL linesmen — John d-Amico and Matt Pavelich from Canada and Gord Broseker and Bob Luther from the United States — are also on hand.

WHA linesmen Ron Foyt and Ken Pierce are also trying out for a chance to work in the tournament as are Canadian amateur officials Daryl Havrelock, John Kelly, Luc Lachapelle and Andy Lagasse.

Ivo Filip and Vladimir Subrt are the two Czechoslovakian officials at the camp, Karl-Gustav Kaisla and Raimo Sepponen are representing Finland, Lars Tegner is the other Swede while Jim Neagles, an International Hockey League official and David Fisher complete the U.S. tryouts.

Canadians win in U.S. Amateur

LOS ANGELES — Two Canadians scored wins and a third drew a bye Tuesday as the United States Amateur golf championship got underway at the 6507-yard Bel-Air Country Club.

Gary Cowan, who won the U.S. Amateur title in 1966 and 1971 and who shared 14th place in this year's Canadian Amateur in Victoria, didn't lose a hole as he trounced David Richards of Chambersburg, Pa., 7 and 6.

And Jim Harrison of Toronto, the 1974 Canadian junior champion and runner-up in 1975, advanced to the second round with a 1-up victory over Michael Preston of Mataway, N.J. Harrison missed the cut in this year's Canadian Amateur Doug Roxburgh of Vancouver, who finished in a tie for fourth place in the Canadian Amateur last week, sees his first action here today after a first-round bye.

Cowan, of Kitchener, is playing in his first U.S Amateur since 1971 because he had wanted to spend more time with his family and life insurance business.

"This was my last year for an exemption," he said in explaining his return to the event.

Giles lost on the 20th hole to Don Reese of West River, Mich., while Siderowf, 39, beat Mike Barge of Fargo, N.D., 1-up despite the fact that he carded an 82.

Dam project serious threat to Island fishing

The proposed McGregor River diversion on a remote section of the Fraser River in northern British Columbia sounds like a long way from Victoria, but Sooke — Becher Bay — Victoria waterfront — Oak Bay anglers could be hurt the most.

It most likely would be the death knell for the fantastic year-round chinook salmon fishing that lower Vancouver Island anglers have been enjoying for it is believed most of these chinooks originate in the upper Fraser River rearing grounds.

Preliminary planning is fairly well completed. All that is needed to start the first of a series of planned dams on the Fraser system — dams that will desecrate the chinook salmon runs — is a political decision to go ahead.

Colonist King Fisherman Contest chinook entries are soaring to new records every month. June saw more entries than in any June since the contest started 22 years ago . . . and nearly all were chinooks from lower Island waters.

July was the second biggest July, only surpassed by July, 1963, when it was a pink salmon year in Juan de Fuca Strait and the commercial fleet was strike-bound. For chinooks alone this past July was the highest ever.

Furthermore, this year's chinooks are big. Two 55½-pounders are tied for top place.

Best of all this chinook fishing has been continuing hot all winter in recent years.

But, these days of fabulous fishing may be coming to an end, unless sports and commercial fishermen unite in vociferous protest before it is too late.

If B.C. Hydro has its way, our bonanza of chinook salmon fishing on southern Vancouver Island may dry up . . . and I literally mean dry up.

B.C. Hydro proposes to dam the McGregor River on the Fraser, one of the main spawning grounds of the Fraser River chinooks. It proposes to dam the McGregor and turn the flow down the Parsnip into the Peace River system to enhance the generating capacity of the W.A.C. Bennett dam.

Goodbye our chinook salmon bonanza from the Fraser River.

Preliminary planning has been going on quietly without fanfare. It will be an accomplished fact almost before the public has an opportunity to muster opposition forces.

And there are other projects under the "System E" planning for hydro and flood control on the Fraser all set to go.

Patrick W. Martin, former B.C. biologist, now turned commercial fisherman, outlines the dangers to the Fraser salmon and commercial and sports salmon fishermen, in an article in Western Fisheries.

"If we cut off the flow of the McGregor we change the regime of flows in the main stream of the Fraser River to a significant degree . . . In reducing the flow of the main stem of the Fraser the degree of concentration of pollutants is increased commensurately," he warns.

Three pulp mills at Prince George and one at Quesnel, plus the sewage from Prince George, Quesnel, Williams Lake and other communities dump pollutants into the Fraser.

Any increase in concentration during periods of low water will have an added deleterious effect upon fish.

Martin says that what is far more disturbing is the probability that the McGregor diversion is merely the opening act in implementation of the "horrifying grandoise scheme, known as System E, for the Fraser River system.

"It entails a series of dams on the tributary streams of the Fraser, whose function will be to produce (cheap?) power and flood control for the lower mainland."

Martins says the main dams will be the McGregor diversion, the Grand Canyon of the Fraser between the confluence of the Fraser and McGregor, and McBride, the Cariboo River and the Clearwater dams.

"Once completed virtually all of the main branches of the Fraser will be cut off to salmon, mainly spring (chinook) salmon. These are all very importatnt spring spawning and rearing rivers," he explains.

"Don't let anyone tell you that the fisheries know all about the spring (chinook) salmon in the Fraser River and its tributaries, they don't," warns Martin. "They spend most of their time on short run fish, like sockeye, pinks and coho."

He says the McGregor project will cut off Herrick Creek, and many other small tributaries; the Grand Canyon will cut off all the spawning from the Topsy to Tete Juan Cache; the Cariboo will affect the Quesnel River and cut off chinook in the upper Cariboo; the Clearwater will vitally affect the productivity of the North Thompson, since it is the most important spring salmon river on the North Thompson system.

"We have already lost the Nechako, and the Lillooet Rivers, so our game of dominoes is heating up and our salmon potential is going down, down, down, as each counter falls. The end result is clear if this madness is not stopped!" he emphasizes.

"Do we need this power? Do we need this flood control? What is the economic rationale of this scheme to end the Fraser River chinook run?" Martin asks.

He says there are other sources of power available in vast coal deposits in the Peace at Hat Creek, Groundhog Mountain and the Kootenays.

He adds there are alternative cheaper methods of easing flood problems . . . like zoning of flood plains and dyking.

"If we want to have our finest salmon in perpetuity the time to fight for them is now," Martin urges.

And you lower Vancouver Island anglers . . . Don't look at this problem as something in for northern B.C. It is right here . . . at Sooke, Beechey Head, Pedder, Victoria, Oak Bay . . where you catch your salmon!

Nanaimo, Courtenay join Island league

Two new teams should add variety to the Vancouver Island Juvenile Football League this season and both will be in action this weekend.

Nanaimo Rams and Comox Valley Builders of Courtenay will have home-field advantage as the five-team league for 17-19-year-olds swings into action on Sunday.

Defending champion Saanich Hornets will be at Bowen Park in Nanaimo while the Builders will play host to Cowichan Timbermen at Lewis Park. Both games start at 2 p.m.

Oak Bay Farmer Construction is the other member of the league.

Saanich Vampires dropped out after last season and a proposed team in Campbell River folded because of a lack of players.

The Barry Taylor-coached Hornets have a strong nucleus of veterans and several top newcomers, including Mike Bennett, a member of the Oregon State high school champions last season and 220-pound rookie tight-end Rob Smith. And the Hornets have added top bantam grads such as quarterback Rich Robertson, Bill Haire and Curtis Westland.

League play continues with two games each Sunday until Oct. 24.

Oak Bay will meet Saanich at Macdonald Park on Sept. 12.

Colorado club picks Wilson

DENVER (AP) — Johnny Wilson, coach of Cleveland Crusaders of the World Hockey Association last season, was named Tuesday to coach the National Hockey League's Colorado Rockies, general manager Ray Miron announced.

Wilson coached Detroit Red Wings of the NHL from 1970 through 1972, before moving on to a one-year stint as assistant to the general manager of Atlanta Flames. He then moved on to the WHA's Michigan Stags and followed the club to Baltimore. In 1975-76 he moved to the helm of the Crusaders.

Wilson, 47, played 11 years in the NHL including six years with the Red Wings before entering the coaching field. The Kincardine, Ont., native once held the NHL record by playing in 580 consecutive games.

New ball clubs get break

SEATTLE (AP) — Seattle Mariners and Toronto Blue-Jays have received "a shot in the arm" through an agreement granting them permission to purchase players before the American League's league Nov. 5 expansion draft, a Mariners official says.

Lou Gorman, director of baseball operations for the Mariners, said the development will allow the Seattle club to enter the expansion draft with 10 to 12 players already in possession.

"For instance, if we can get a fair number of veterans on hand, we could go for more youth in the draft," Gorman said.

Under the agreement, the Mariners and Blue Jays can make tentative purchases but the deals will not become final until Sept. 15.

"We can make out deals right now," he said. It is just we can't take title to the players until that date."

Racetrack probe at Regina

REGINA (CP) — Officials have confirmed that three jockeys and a number of other track personnel have been "released" from the thoroughbred racing meet under way in Regina.

The officials said that an investigation is under way, but they declined to give details.

Track steward Tom Sumner, representing the Saskatchewan Jockey Club, said various individuals were released because they "weren't conducting their business in a proper way."

"We let these people go for the sake of racing."

The general manager of the Saskatchewan Jockey Club, Tom McLeod, said he does not think the situation is serious:

"What the stewards did was say 'we don't like the way you're behaving, so go somewhere else."

"Nobody was fined as such and no rulings have been made."

The jockeys who were asked to leave are Don Stauffer, Thomas Hinojosa and Gerry Kipling. Also released were a number of starting-gate personnel and valets.

Weiskopf escapes further discipline

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — No disciplinary action is contemplated against Tom Weiskopf for his disqualification in last week's American golf tournament, commissioner Deane Beman of the Professional Golfers' Association tour said Tuesday.

"The disqualification of a player for a violation of a rule of golf is a frequent occurrence on the tour," Beman said in a prepared statement.

"It is unfortunate that the media would seize on a common occurrence to imply that any player should be disciplined for a violation of a rule of golf beyond the penalties prescribed in the rules."

Weiskopf was diswualified for playing the 18th hole of the third round Saturday after the siren had blown calling the players off the course because of an approaching thunderstorm. His playing partners Danny Edwards and Jerry Pate, did not play the hole until the following day.

The Associated Press speculated that Weiskopf, who was on probation by the PGA at the time, might be subject to further disciplinary action.

Select pro golf field set for World Series

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — The new-look World Series of Golf, designed as the tour's answer to the World Series, the Super Bowl and the Stanley Cup, makes its maiden appearance under an expanded and enriched format Thursday.

"Golf has long suffered from the lack of a climactic, season-ending event," said Deane Beman, commissioner of the Professional Golfers' Association.

"You have such events in other sports, baseball's World Series, football's Super Bowl. With the new World Series of Golf, we feel we now have a climax to the season, a real high point.

"We will be interested to see the reception it receives from the press, the public and the players."

He has a disciple in Tom Watson, who won the 1975 World Series when it was a four-man, 36-hole tournament.

"It's already a major tournament," Watson said. "You've got a great field, an international field, and the tournament is being played on a great golf course.

The field consists of 20 players, 16 from the American tour and the winners of four foreign orders of merit. The site for the 72-hole tournament is the South course at the Firestone Country Club.

As a group, they have won 35 of the 42 events on the American tour this year and have collected more than one-third of all the money offered on the tour. The purses for tour events have totalled $6.59 million so far this season. Those 16 have combined winnings of $2.27 million.

Also in the field are Allan Henning, winner of the South African Order of Merit; Billy Dunk winner of the Australian OM; Hsu Sheng-San, winner of the Asian OM; and Takashi Murakami, winner of the Japanese OM. Neil Coles was eligible after winning the British OM but declined to compete.

Five players in the field have won before on the long, tough, 7180-yard, par-70 South course. Watson took the World Series last year. Trevino won it in 1974. Geiberger won the 1965 American golf tournament and the 1966 PGA national championship. Floyd won the 1969 American title.

And Nicklaus has won six times. He won four previous World Series, one American title and last year's PGA. The long layout ranks as, perhaps, his most happy hunting ground. He has collected more than $390,000 in winnings from this course alone.

Graham in sixth place

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Australian David Graham's $40,000 prize for winning the American golf tournament moved him into sixth place on the 1976 United States tour earnings list with $134,708 dollars, the Professional Golfers' Association said Tuesday.

Ben Crenshaw still leads the list with $219,201. Crenshaw won the Irish Open last week, but the $12,600 he earned does not count toward his U.S. tour total.

The top 10: 1. Crenshaw, $219,201, 2. Hubert Green, $195,654, 3. Hale Irwin, $191,427, 4. Al Geiberger, $182,184, 5. Jack Nicklaus, $161,768, 6. Graham, $154,708, 7. J. C. Snead, $147,882, 8. Jerry Pate, $142,472, 9. Don January, $140,100, 10. Ray Floyd, $131,918.

Jockey satisfactory

Ms. Airth, 21, was thrown under Lady Latimer while negotiating a first turn. Lady Latimer went down after clipping the heels of Regal Return.

On May 21, Ms. Airth became the first woman ever to ride a winner in British Columbia thoroughbred racing where parimutuel wagering is allowed.

She finished fifth in the featured ninth race Monday night on Ask The Fleet, the horse she rode to her first win. She came back in the 10th with 23-to-one shot Lady Latimer and was sitting in good position when the mishap occurred

Ms. Airth regained consciousness before leaving the track by ambulance. A hospital spokesman said Tuesday that she did not appear to have any broken bones.

NFL players table new contract offer

CHICAGO (UPI) — Player representatives of National Football League teams voted Tuesday night to table a proposal from management for a new contract.

The vote, which neither Players Association president Dick Anderson of the Miami Dolphins or executive director Ed Garvey would announce, came at the conclusion of a 10-hour meeting in which the representatives discussed and voted individually on more than 30 articles in the proposed agreement.

Garvey said the vote to table the proposal called for clarification of various points in the agreement.

"What we do will have to be discussed with players around the league," Garvey said. "The representatives felt we needed to continue bargaining."

Anderson, who negotiated the proposal with Dan Rooney of Pittsburgh Steelers, with the participation of NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle, said he "faorved the proposal. I thought it was something the players could live with and deal with.

"I'm disappointed," Anderson said. "I feel it was the best offer we're going to get. Now we'll have to go further and continue to negotiate."

The executive commission of the assocation approved the proposal and submitted it to the player representatives and Garvey said one of the player representatives in the meeting said it was the job of the negotiators to "get the best possible offer they can get and if the representatives want to take it, they can."

Garvey and Anderson would not disclose the contents in the 70-page contract proposal and Garvey said, "If we start announcing what's troublesome it may complicate the bargaining process. You have to look at the total package."

Garvey said there was no discussion in the meeting of a possible strike nor was any date set for future negotiations.

The players have not had a contract since 1974 and played without a contract for the last two seasons with a brief strike during training camp preceding the 1974 season.

Failure of the player representatives to take a stand on the contract, which was understood to include limits on the size of team squads, probably meant the owners would have to establish squad size at a meeting scheduled in New York today.

Various points known to be included in the contract proposal specified minimum salaries, pre-season play, the application of the Rozelle Rule, moving expenses, pensions and medical insurance.

Russians won't play against Chile

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Tennis Federation has refused to play Chile, its scheduled opponent, in the next stage of the Davis Cup tennis tournament. The federation cited its "indignation with the horrible crimes committed by the Chilean military junta."

In a brief statement Tuesday carried by the Soviet news agency Tass, the federation said that "bloody terror is reigning in Chile and human rights are grossly flouted."

The Soviet Union joined Chile in the interzone semi-finals by beating Hungary earlier this month.

HOW TO FIX A WHITE ELEPHANT

It sounds like it should be big and white and wild. But strangely, a White Elephant is short and white and smooth. So smooth, and so delicious, in fact, that you'll hardly know that it has 2 oz. of liquor in it. Like all elephants, a White Elephant should always be treated with respect.

Here's all you do to mix a White Elephant: pour 1 oz. Smirnoff, 1 oz. white creme de cacao and 1 oz. milk into a short glass with ice. Stir. And enjoy the little alabaster behemoth.

They'll help consumers to battle computers

Following the lead of a service operating in Vancouver for two years, the Victoria Computer Ombudsman Service will attempt to help citizens who feel they have been victimized by a computer.

The Victoria chapter of the Canadian Information Processing Society approved in April the formation of a special interest group to establish a computer ombudsman service for the Vancouver Island area. Chairman of the volunteer organization is Stan Clark of the University of Victoria.

Computer problems were classified into three types by the service:

● Individual specific errors, such as a department store computer which keeps billing customers for something which had been paid for.

● Errors due to faulty design of computer systems.

● Possible future political and social problems caused by large-scale computerization.

However, the Victoria service also plans to get into "class" actions arising out of situations where a number of individuals are affected and where the fault lies in the design or use of the system.

An example would be the billing system that handles charge account monthly statements with such timing as to make it almost impossible for the debtor to make the payment without incurring additional interest charges.

The service will also monitor the computer field for early warnings of potential trouble and recommend policies to head it off.

Members of the organization are managers, systems analysts or programmers from industry and government, as well as UVic faculty and staff.

The Victoria Computer Ombudsman Service may be reached by telephoning 477-6911 or by writing the University of Victoria, PO Box 1700, V8N 2Y2.

Labor minister enters battle of construction

Labor Minister Allan Williams will make his first appearance on the B.C. construction battlefront today in a personal bid to head off another total shutdown of the troubled industry.

Williams' meeting in Vancouver with both sides in the prolonged dispute comes two days in advance of the renewed lockout called by the Construction Labor Relations Association.

The minister said he would meet separately with CLRA and the construction unions.

There was speculation by some unionists that he would present the parties with an ultimatum in a final effort to keep the industry operating.

Closed down for 37 days in June and July as the result of a combined lockout-strike, the industry was barely back on its feet when Vancouver-based plumbers struck against 15 contractors two weeks ago.

The new strike, called over such issues as downtown parking privileges and hot lunch allowances, brought the second lockout threat from CLRA Monday.

CLRA president Chuck McVeigh said in Vancouver Tuesday night that his organization's council was "almost unanimous" in its decision and that it was given "strong support" by a general membership meeting Tuesday.

Like some of his union counterparts, McVeigh was hopeful the meeting with the labor minister might provide a way out of the threatened shutdown.

"But if we've got to go, we're prepared to go," McVeigh said. "As much as we don't like to do this, we can't stand idly by and watch a union strike 15 of our members like this. Beyond that, we have said right from the beginning we must have a settlement with all of the unions."

Some 850 contractors are represented by the CLRA. The earlier lockout-strike was the fourth consecutive bargaining-year shutdown.

It involved 15 unions, seven sub-unions and a large percentage of the 40,000 tradesmen working for the contractors. It was also reported to have halted work on as much as $3 billion in building projects.

The end came with a report from industrial inquiry commissioner James Kinnaird, who proposed wage increases of 11.2 to 13.6 per cent on base rates ranging from $9.50 to $12.19 an hour.

Ferry officers ban overtime

Regularly scheduled overtimes will not be affected.

The officers, members of the ferry officers' local of the 35,000 member B.C. Government Employees Union, took the action as a "token gesture of defiance," union agent Peter Marshall said.

The Horseshoe Bay terminal officers met to decide whether to support the Oct. 14 strike called by the Canadian Labor Congress.

Since the ferry officers' 90-day strike mandate expired Aug. 29, they took the token action instead.

Marshall said he doubted that the ban on voluntary overtime would have any effect on travel over the holiday weekend.

Saanich hasn't been getting its money's worth—Lum

Saanich is not getting its money's worth from the Capital Region District, Mayor Ed Lum said Tuesday.

He said cost of regional government to the Saanich taxpayer this year amounted to $500,000.

Regional government, he fears, is building into a bureaucracy of red tape and is assuming far too many responsibilities.

Lum said the regional board was building up a level of government that many felt should be handled by the province.

One area of responsibility which falls into this category is health care.

Lum
. . . bureaucracy

"He said there was too great a tendency to give regional districts added functions without it first being proven that such action was the cheapest for the taxpayer.

Planning is another area in which the mayor resents intrusion of regional boards.

Regional districts should concern themselves with planning matters in electoral districts only — not in municipalities, Lum said.

"We have a top-notch planning staff, yet we are being charged for maintenance of the regional district planning department."

Lum said there had been some interference in the municipality's planning affairs by the region.

He said it was awfully difficult to halt the spreading octopus of empire-building because department heads, when requesting additional staff, usually had pretty good facts and figures to substantiate their arguments.

The mayor said he agreed with Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, who recently told regional districts throughout the province to solve their unpopularity problems or have them solved for them.

The government intends to survey the basic terms of reference for regional districts to determine the root of the problems.

Lum said he agreed the time was ripe to determine where regional government was headed.

It's your parking problem L.A.B.

The Liquor Administration Branch can solve the traffic problem it created with the opening of its Yates Street outlet as far as Victoria's traffic committee is concerned.

The committee decided Tuesday to set aside a request from the liquor board for short-term parking in front of the store and further moved that the branch be requested to supply a commissionaire to keep the traffic moving in the area.

Mayor Michael Young noted that city's original objections to parking deficiencies at the store on Yates were coming true.

"They've given us two of these," said Ald. Murray Glazier who noted that the Nootka Court store also had no parking provisions for liquor customers.

"I'm more concerned with the people (merchants) who had the inconvenience of street widening during the liquor store construction . . . who need street parking in the Wharf and Yates area," he said.

Ald. Alf Hood blamed the congestion on Yates to the increasing double and triple parking by liquor store patrons. City engineer John Sansom told the committee that the traffic department had to employ an extra commissionaire just to patrol that area during the Christmas rush last year.

Solitary picket hits CUPE today

Barring late developments, a lone woman will bring work to a halt today in more than a dozen Victoria union offices.

The action of Elaine Tolonen—will simply reflect something happening across Canada, as she carries a picket sign announcing that the big Canadian Union of Public Employees is being struck by its own clerical workers.

The Office and Professional Employees' International Union staged its first one-day strike against CUPE, nine days ago.

Ms. Tolonen simply placed a notice of the strike on the door of her CUPE general office, sparing all the other unions sharing the same Quadra Street labor building a picket line.

On that occasion it involved only her immediate boss, CUPE representative Tom Smith, who stayed out to honor her strike.

Since then, Smith has left on holidays and the other CUPE representative, Alex Markides, has returned from his vacation.

There were indications that Markides would show the same support and carry a picket sign of his own.

The building involved is the new labor hall at Quadra and Market, beside the older Union Centre.

Among the union operations affected will be four CUPE offices, two Letter Carriers' offices, two B.C. Government Employees' Union offices, and single offices of the Beverage Dispensers, Hospital Employees' Union and others.

Leaders of the 225,000-member CUPE have come in for criticism — much of it from CUPE staff representatives — for the treatment of their clerical workers.

The clerical workers, averaging $234 a week, were offered wage increases of only 3.5 per cent in each of two years, even though CUPE has been one of the strongest opponents of the Anti-Inflation Board and its eight-per-cent limit on wage hikes.

Ottawa studies complaints

By BILL SMITH
Colonist Reporter

Veterans' affairs department officials are "very intensively" studying complaints about the Memorial Pavilion, Bruce Brittain, the department's deputy minister, said in a telephone interview from Ottawa.

"The minister (Daniel MacDonald) has been fully apprised of the situation in Victoria, and an intensive investigation into veterans' complaints concerning the institution is now under way," Brittain said.

Brittain said the minister would be in Victoria soon, "and will certainly be visiting the former Veterans' Hospital."

There is also action on the home front.

Following Sunday's public meeting at which the Victoria-based Veterans' Rights Association was formed, Esquimalt Social Credit MLA Lyle Kahl met with Health Minister Robert McClelland.

Provincial health minister told of veterans' protests

Kahl said Tuesday he discussed the meeting in detail and would meet again with McClelland "when I have assembled more information."

Renegotiation of a federal-provincial Veterans' Hospital agreement and standardized medical treatment for veterans across Canada are being sought by the newly-formed group.

Brittain agreed the document could be changed by mutual consent of both signatories.

He admitted considerable correspondence had been received recently over conditions at the institution, with most letters complaining about patients' food, staff shortages, and the quality of care.

The veterans' rights group is bitter over reduction in services at the pavilion since the takeover of the hospital two years ago by the provincial government.

Full services remain at Shaughnessy veterans hospital in Vancouver, leading to charges that Vancouver Island veterans were being treated as second-class citizens.

Brittain explained that the services were relocated to adjoining Royal Jubilee Hospital, so there would be no duplication of these services.

The deputy minister said it was his understanding that veterans requiring extended-care beds could still be admitted to the pavilion.

"I am right in the midst of a very intensive investigation and will have more to say at a later date," the civil servant said.

Meanwhile, for the first time since the controversy started three weeks ago, hospital employees decided to speak out Tuesday.

Expressing deep concern over staff cutbacks in the past few months, they agreed that complaints would be aggravated still further by more cutbacks to come.

A serious morale problem at the hospital was being aggravated by workers who were not pulling their weight, some told the Colonist.

The workers were all steadfast in their belief that the level of patient care had deteriorated because of shortage of staff.

They also agreed with complaints about food served patients, with one employee saying he wouldn't eat the food or drink the coffee.

"It's a very frustrating situation," one employee said, "especially when people come in to tend their relatives. It makes us feel we are not doing our jobs.

"We are doing our jobs to the best of our ability, but because we are so short-staffed, it is awfully difficult to please everyone."

On an afternoon shift (2 p.m. to 10 p.m.) for example, there is a staff of four to care for a ward containing 35 to 40 patients.

The staff comprises a registered nurse, one orderly, a nurse's aide and a licensed practical nurse. Their task is complicated to some degree by relatives who visit the hospital and demand immediate attention for patients they are visiting.

Later this month, student nurses will be replacing licensed practical nurses and some aides because, as one employee put it: "They are a lot cheaper to hire."

Already complaints have been received about young, inexperienced student nurses being expected to lift heavy men.

Frustration so evident among staff is mirrored in their statement that "it's no use complaining. If you make too much noise you are likely to lose your job."

Accusing the administration of a "couldn't-care-less attitude toward patients and staff," they said there was nowhere they could take complaints because no one seemed to give a damn.

Intersection closed today

The intersection of Cook and Finlayson will be closed today, Thursday and Friday because of road construction and installation of traffic lights, Victoria traffic police said Tuesday.

Drivers going north on Cook should detour by travelling one block west on Lang, two blocks north on Highview and one block east on Merritt back to Cook. The detour is just the opposite for southbound traffic.

No plans to close Memorial Pavilion

Quashing reports circulating locally that the hospital was being phased out, Brittain said he had no knowledge of patients being transferred to Shaughnessy Hospital in Vancouver from the pavilion so that the building could be closed down.

He said there was absolutely no truth in reports that the former veterans' hospital was to be phased out.

Neighborhoods out of plan

Victoria's offical community plan is only a week short of receiving approval in principle before going to public hearing at the end of October.

Council in caucus Tuesday went over the draft proposal prepared by city planning staff and on the advice of the advisory planning commission deleted a supplement to the plan dealing specifically with neighborhoods.

Mayor Michael Young told caucus the commission recommended the section be dropped because in many cases it dealt with areas for which detailed plans were in progress.

However, according to Young, the principles involved in the planning of these neighborhoods are stated within the actual draft.

But at the urging of Ald. Murray Glazier, caucus agreed to incorporate the part of the supplement dealing with the Inner Harbor into the main plan. Glazier told caucus that Victoria couldn't possibly have an official community plan with no specific mention of the Inner Harbor area.

Under provincial regulations, the plan must be completed and filed by the end of November. Essentially, community plans are more a statement of existing and future planning principles for the city than detailed zoning documents.

In other business, caucus agreed to issue a one-year business licence to Marguerite Tours Ltd., subject to approval by the Motor Carrier Commission, to operate sightseeing tours from one motorized trolley car. At the same time, caucus decided that a traffic order must be drawn up limiting the north side of Belleville west of Government to non-motorized tour operators.

Young said that from a safety angle, he didn't want to see the horse tours fighting for space with the vehicle operators.

Caucus also looked at preliminary amendments to a land-use contract with Canadian Freehold Properties Ltd. for the Laurel Point development.

The request from the company to alter the existing contract came earlier this year, when it announced it would not be able to go ahead with an eight-storey hotel complex but was considering one half that size.

Under the amendments, the company wants the Jan. 1, 1978, deadline for starting construction lifted, and that it be held only to completion within three years, once construction starts.

Although the city has heard of no starting date, sources close to the company say plans call for a January, 1977, start.

Girl's 50-pound tyee now biggest in club

Eighteen-year-old Ann Pengelley's 50-pounder from Frenchman's Pool has taken over the lead as top fish registered this year with the Tyee Club of British Columbia at Campbell River.

Ann was using a Lucky Louie plug and 20-pound-test line.

It was the 54th fish registered with the Tyee Club this year, and takes the lead from Harry Thulin's 43.8-pounder. Thulin was guided by Ross Spiers.

Ban on sports fishing set in Cowichan Bay

Colonist Correspondent

To ensure better stocks of coho and chinook salmon, all sports fishing will be prohibited in the tidal waters of the Koksilah and Cowichan Rivers as of midnight Monday.

A federal fisheries spokesman said this closure, which will extend straight across from a boundary sign on Skinner Point in the north to a sign on the south shore of Cowichan Bay, was instituted each fall to allow spawning salmon to return to the rivers.

He added that further information on gear and size restrictions could be obtained through the local offices of the federal fisheries service and the fish and wildlife branch in Duncan.

ann landers

Dear Ann: This letter is for the 5-9 teenager who wanted information on major surgery that could make her shorter.

First of all, she must learn to be patient. I am 25 years old and six feet tall. I learned early in life to turn a "disadvantage" into an advantage. She can, too.

Here are some helpful hints:

1. High school boys are usually immature. They like "little" girls who make them feel big and masculine. Wait till you get to college. You'll find the men there have a totally different attitude.

2. Stand tall, a good posture accentuates a good figure. You look worse when you slump, trying to hide your height.

3. Keep smiling. Those who make jokes at your expense are probably jealous because they aren't getting any attention.

4. If I put on ten pounds I'm the only one who knows it. The shorties are always on a diet. What a pleasure to eat whatever I want!

By the way, I married a man two inches shorter than myself and I couldn't be happier. He is so great for my ego — insists that I wear heels. — Height Of Happiness

Dear H of H: I received a surprising number of letters from tall gals who love it up there — more evidence that it's not the altitude but the attitude that counts.

Dear Ann Landers: Will you let a teenager tell about her experience with a psychiatrist?

Nearly a year ago I was caught shoplifting. I had plenty of money in my purse and didn't need or want the articles I stole. My parents were told I needed therapy.

The following week I went to a psychiatrist. I made up my mind I wasn't going to talk. I just sat there even though I knew my folks had to pay for the sessions whether I talked or not. (It was my way of getting even.)

After three sessions of looking at the wall, the psychiatrist said. "Nobody can make you talk if you don't want to. It's up to you."

It was as if somebody had unlocked my mouth. All of a sudden I began to pour out all the feelings that were deep inside me. I've been going for five months and I know now that my whole life is going to be different. I thought I was being sent to a mean old shrink, but instead I found a friend. — All Smiles

Dear Smiles: Thanks for the cheerful testimonial — straight from the couch. And now may I add a word to other teens who are in therapy? You'll get out of your sessions exactly what you put into them. If you want honest t' goodness help, don't sit there like a wart on a pickle. Talk, talk, talk, talk, talk, talk!

Dear Ann Landers: I've been reading your column since I was a little girl. I like to put my hand over your answers and think up my own. Then I compare mine with yours and see how I did.

Recently I did better than you. I wonder if you will agree. Someone wrote in and asked if it was possible to sue a husband for rape. You said "No." The correct answer is, "Yes — so long as it's not your OWN husband." — One Upsmanship In Boston.

Dear Upsman: I stand corrected. Your answer was better than mine. Thanks for gloating — er, I mean writing.

He has irons in fire

DOUGLAS, Ont. (CP) — Eric Watson is believed to have one of the largest collections of irons in the country. The retired feed-mill worker has been gathering them for 16 years and now owns more than 200.

His heaviest is a 30-pound tailor's iron, his smallest a one-ounce toy used to press dolls' clothes. He has irons heated by alcohol, natural gas, charcoal, gasoline, kerosene, electricity and by the old method of setting them on a hot stove.

Included are hat irons, cap irons, sleeve irons, billiard-table irons and goffering irons. The last were used to put crimps in nun's habits.

The Cheater, a 1906 electric iron, could double as a small stove. It was sold with a trivet. Place upside-down on this stand, the iron could be used to make tea or heat soup.

Czech rock trial put off

PRAGUE (Reuter) — Trial of 14 Czechoslovak rock musicians and artists, due to begin this week, has been postponed, informed sources say.

The group, most of them members of the Plastic People of the Universe and DG 307 rock bands, have been charged with disrupting public order, and face between six months and three years in jail if found guilty.

The sources said no new date had been announced.

They speculated the postponement could be an attempt to foil moves of support for the 14 accused, seven of whom are in preventive detention.

In Vienna, Amnesty International, the London-based human rights group, announced it would fight for the release of the musicians, and said the Prague authorities had mounted "an unprecedented campaign of slander" against them.

Jerry Lewis to make debut on Broadway

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I've been waiting 45 years for this," says Jerry Lewis of his forthcoming debut in a Broadway show.

The comedian starts rehearsals Oct. 18 for a new version of Hellzapoppin, the long-running comedy show of the late 1930s with Olsen and Johnson as stars. The new show will be entirely different, says Lewis, but it will be just as zany.

Lewis is co-owner of the show with producer Alexander Cohen. The comedian expects to stay with Hellzapoppin for two years, then make a film version.

Companies await converter bonanza

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist Reporter

With midband television due in Greater Victoria this fall, one Victoria businessman said Tuesday he had formed a company to go into the converter business on a sizeable scale while a second firm said its sales would continue.

Veteran Victoria salesman Ray Williams, 42, general manager of Converters Unlimited, said he had obtained a franchise for Jerrold converters in most of B.C. and would shortly assemble a staff and open a warehouse and office in north Victoria.

Meanwhile, an official of Electrohome Ltd., 155 Langford, which has been selling Hamlin converters for upwards of two years, said the firm would continue sales from its own offices and through various department and other stores.

The Canadian Radio-Television and Telecomunications Commission has given Victoria Cablevision Ltd. permission to begin midband programming with Tacoma educational station KCPQ-TV and four "community" channels showing news, weather information, education and provincial matters.

This was in addition to changes in the regular 2-13 cable spectrum, which by the end of this month will see CBUFT of Vancouver on Cable 3, KVOS of Bellingham on Cable 12 only and CKVU of Vancouver on Cable 13. The result is that every channel in the 2-13 range is filled for the first time.

That leaves no room for KCPQ, community channels or the Victoria CBC station which is expected in 1978. In addition, some U.S. stations now seen on regular cable may be moved to midband for technical reasons.

Williams said his firm would provide service as well as sales, offering a 36-channel Jerrold for $104.95 or a 30-channel model for slightly less.

He and other experts in the field believe converters can improve viewing for several reasons. For one a converter bypasses a TV set's tuner, and the older the tuner, the weaker the picture.

But Williams thinks the main advantage of converters is instant channel-changing without having to go to the set.

The Electrohome official said the Japanese-made, 35-channel Hamlin converters sold at $99.95 and operated by slide-tuner rather than push-button. He and others estimated there were already 300 or more midband converters attached to Greater Victoria sets.

Williams said his firm might have a lease provision soon, as well as outright sale, and added it had no financial connection with Victoria Cablevision and its group or with Jerrold, a Toronto-based division of General Instrument of Canada Ltd. Similarly, there was no connection between Hamlin and the cable firms.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden Notes

Once upon a time, a farmer had a very good and hard-working hired hand whom he valued highly. After a particularly strenuous and exhausting harvesting season, he decided to reward his man by putting him on an easy, sit-down job, so he set him to work in the barn sorting potatoes, separating the larger saleable ones from the little "chats" which would be used for seed.

Halfway through the first afternoon, the man came storming to the farmer's back door. "I'm quitting," he said. "Gimme my time."

"Why, what's the matter?" asked the farmer. "I've just given you the easiest job on the whole farm."

"Easy, hell!" bellowed the hired hand. "It's decisions, decisions. The responsibility is killing me!"

For those home gardeners who like to save their own seed potatoes when lifting their crop, I should point out there is a right way and a wrong way to select those tubers for planting out next spring.

The whole idea back of selecting seed potatoes is to pick the ones which will give you the biggest crop of reasonably large, clean-skinned, shallow-eyed potatoes next year. However, the average backyard gardener will usually do just the opposite, setting aside the best of his crop to eat, and picking his next year's seed from the little ones left over. Let's see how this works out:

He goes out to dig his crop. Some of the plants are good performers, some just average, while some are definitely poor yielders. The first plant he forks up is a good one and he gets, say, six nice kitchen-size eating potatoes and two little ones. The big ones are sacked up for storage while the "chats" are set aside for seed.

Plant No. 2 is only fair, giving three usable spuds and four little ones. Plant No. 3 is a poor one and yields only one eating-size potato and six chats. Let's stop right here and see what we have in the seed box.

From the three plants we have 10 potatoes for eating and 12 small ones set aside for seed. But here is the important statistical fact: Out of those 12 seed potatoes, 10 have come from poor-yielding plants. Only two out of twelve of our seed potatoes have inherited the pototo qualities we desire, and if planted out next spring, the proportion is bound to be lower.

The same thing happens when all the potatoes are dug and gathered into storage, and a final grading is made, dividing the crop into usable potatoes and those only good enough for seed. This way, your chances of upgrading the quality of you crop are stacked against you.

The trick in grading up next year's yield lies in selecting your seed potatoes only from the best PLANTS — the ones which yield the greatest number of clean, well-formed, eating size potatoes, avoiding like the plague any plants that run to too many chats.

You can't do this after the whole crop is lifted. The only sound way is to keep a carton or basket by you as you work, and make your selection on the basis of the individual plant's performance and general health.

If I had to choose between a good-looking potato from a poor-yielding plant and a crummy-looking specimen from a plant of excellent performance, I'd pick the poor one, for at least it will have inherited the right genes. Fortunately, such a choice is seldom necessary, for a good plant will always produce enough clean, well-formed seed.

Tubers about the size of a Grade A Large breakfast egg make the best seed — when they come from the right plant. Dry them thoroughly in the sun before storing. They store best in a cool place, but unlike spuds stored for food, they don't insist on darkness. A green skin caused by exposure to light is no detriment to a seed potato.

Jack Smith

Television's new prime-time cultural hero this fall, according to New York magazine, will be the newspaper reporter, or "newshound," to use the magazine's word. "First it was the thundering hooves of a posse of Wyatt Earps and Paladins," the item says, "then the whine of police sirens in a dozen cops-and-robbers series. This season it's be the tap-tap-tap of the city room typewriter . . ."

One of the shows will centre on a love affair between an aging columnist and a young photographer; another will star Raymond Burr as editor of a newspaper chain owned by a fiftyish woman, and the third will feature a hard-digging young male investigative reporter.

I can't help feeling a certain gratification at this news. At last the newspaper reporter, so long disdained by the true professionals with whom his work often brought him into contact — lawyers, detectives, criminals, politicians — is to be admitted to their status.

This new respect for us once grubby tradesmen is plainly just another of the many fringe results of Watergate, and the new image of the reporter as projected by Woodward and Bernstein in their book, and by Redford and Hoffman in the movie, All the President's Men.

Thanks is due mostly to the movie, I suppose; for no matter how hard the director tried for realism, Woodward and Bernstein were supposed to look like heroes, sort of, so they are portrayed as sober, literate and clean, if not tidy; and are not allowed to grind their cigarettes out in the carpet. There is no way you are going to make a Marcus Welby out of Carl Bernstein or Dustin Hoffman, but at least you can give the impression that if one of them rang Welby's doorbell the doctor's maid might let him in, to wait in the foyer.

We have come a long way from the days of The Front Page. But all the credit can't go to Watergate, even though it did illuminate the role of the press in keeping the government fairly honest, and show the reporter as hard-working and halfway intelligent, as well as creepy

Actually, newspaper reporters have always been like that. It wasn't their character that gave them such a bad name; it was their life-style and their philosophy. They were so poorly paid they could never quite afford suburban middle-class entanglements, and their work made them associates if not allies of quacks, shysters, con men, hookers, embezzlers, ax murderers, politicians and other reporters, and their only friends were bartenders. Naturally they devloped thin shells of cynicism to shield their mushy sentimental centres.

Back in the 1940s, I think it was, when every city room still had its Hildy Johnson, the New Yorker published a cartoon that showed half a dozen young men loitering on the steps of a college building in rumpled clothes with loosened neckties, hats on the back of their heads, and cigarettes hanging from their lips. Over the doorway was engraved the legend SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM.

That cartoon was very significant. Its point was that now, in the era after the Second World War, would-be newspaper reporters were actually going to college, but they still tried to look as if they had been pulled out of the soup line in front of the rescue mission. As it so often did in those days, the New Yorker had neatly noted a cultural trend.

So the transformation which, it appears, will soon be documented on prime time, began long before Watergate. cultural trend.

It can not be linked, either, to the increasing presence of women in the city room. A reporter is a reporter, whether man or woman. We had lots of women around when I was a young reporter and I can say for them that they were just as able, tacky and dissolute as the rest of us. (One thing different about today's women reporters is that some of them refer to themselves as "newspersons," as if the word reporter itself was either sexist or otherwise offensive. Thank God H. L. Mencken isn't alive to see "newspersons" in print.)

The change was accelerated in the 1950s with the general national affluence and the rise in a reporter's pay to rank with that of his friend the bartender. It was in this era that reporters began to go into respectable debt, acquiring automobiles and homes and even joining country clubs.

It was not long before his death in the 1950s, in fact, that Mencken himself deplored this amalgamation of his own kind into the general culture. "Why there are reporters today," he said in his one and only interview on radio, his voice gravid with revulsion, "who play golf!"

So it will be interesting to see whether this fall's ventures into the city room depict the new journalism or revert to the old, with Xaviera Holander as a hard-digging newsperson and Telly Savalas as editor of the New York Times.

The show that interests me most, of course, is the one about the love affair between the aging columnist and the young photographer. Assuming the young photographer is a photoperson, I just might be available as a technical consultant.

Sydney Harris

Both the major U.S. political parties are less than candid about the vexing subject of "tax reform," but it must be admitted that the Republicans are more honest about it than the Democrats are. The Republicans hardly pretend to care much about anyone who isn't a certified WASP making it in an antiseptic suburb, while the Democrats shed huge crocodile tears about the tax burden on the poor.

But, realistically, it has been the Democratic majority in Congress that has steadily shied away from imposing a progressive tax on citizens, while paying lip-service to the ideal—for the eminently practical reason that no way can be found to do this that would not alienate tens of millions of middle-class voters.

In point of fact, all proposals for "tax reform" are phonies as long as they concentrate on income, and not on wealth. There are simply not enough tax monies to be derived from income alone to relieve the poor and lower middle classes.

This is a stubborn fiscal fact behind all the political double-talk. "Soaking the rich" is an absurd and hypocritical populist slogan, if it is meant in terms of annual income, because any such soaking, to be genuinely remedial, would have to be so extensive and so extreme as to cripple the economy more than reviving it.

There are simply not enough people earning enough money each year to raise the taxes that would be necessary to alleviate the plight of the lower fifth who live below or near the poverty line. If every family in the country making more than $30,000 a year were taxed a full 50 per cent, with no deductions allowed, the sum collected would hardly make a ripple in the tax structure.

"Wealth" is another matter entirely. If there were a progressive tax on net worth, rather than income, this would bring in an enormous sum that could relieve the bottom two-fifths of taxpayers from their present burden. But there is no more chance of enacting such a law than there is of getting Congress to cut its own salaries in half.

Nor am I saying that this necessarily should be done; it may be a good or bad idea, and economists of differing faiths will argue the matter bitterly. All I am pointing out is that "tax reform" will continue to remain a sour joke unless and until the American people decide how and in what way they want the income pie redistributed.

We are merely deluding ourselves if we imagine that fiddling around with the present system will do more than provide a minor palliative. The Democratic Congress, which professes to be "for the peepul," has had a quarter-century to come up with a feasible plan, and has not even made a serious effort.

No matter what Jimmy the Grin promises if he is elected, he will be able to accomplish little more than Jerry the Grim in the way of tax reform. Jerry's only merit in this department is that he doesn't pretend to care if the bottom fifth is able to hack it at all.

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — Lunched the other day with Carol White, the beautiful blonde English actress who made such a big impact a few years ago in Poor Cow.

It was the movie that brought her to the United States in a wave of publicity — and then, all of a sudden, Carol disappeared from the scene.

Where has she been all these years?

"Living out at Malibu.

When she first came over here, she was married to British rock star Michael King. They had two sons, Sean, now 13, and Stephen, now 11.

"We're divorced now too but we're back living together."

"I stayed out of the business because I wanted to be home with my sons while they were growing up."

But now she is back in business with The Squeeze, a story in which she plays a kidnapping victim, along with Stacy Keach, David Hemmings, Edward Fox and Stephen Boyd.

"I was offered lot of parts in the last four or five years," she says, "but The Squeeze was the only one that interested me.

"I have been in the business since I was 11 — and I just got tired of playing those dim little birds. This role in The Squeeze excited me so now I'm back acting."

Carol had let her hair go to its natural chestnut color but as soon as she got back before the cameras, the edict went out to make it platinum.

"They said it wouldn't be Carol White with brown hair."

Must say she looks sensational.

She was raving about Steve Boyd's performance as the leader of the kidnap gang.

"He plays it as an Ulster man which gives it added terror. He's so convincing."

Told her he should be. Steve comes from Belfast.

"I never knew that," said Carol. "I always thought he was English."

Clark delays riding choice

CALGARY (CP) — Joe Clark, federal Progressive Conservative leader, said Tuesday he won't announce whether he will seek nomination in Bow River or Yellowhead riding until all Alberta MPs meet in Ottawa in October to discuss the situation.

Earlier Tuesday, Stan Schumacher, the Conservative MP for Palliser, said Mr. Clark is backing off from a nominating confrontation with him over the Bow River constituency.

Clark's Rocky Mountain riding will disappear under a proposed redistribution of parliamentary seats. The southern end will be joined with a large chunk of the existing Palliser riding to form the riding of Bow River.

The northern part of the Rocky Mountain seat will become the new seat of Yellowhead and will be extended from Jasper to the Edson region.

Schumacher said last fall he would seek the nomination in Bow River. He has said he will oppose any attempt by the Tory leader to run in Bow River.

Clark said Tuesday: "Of course there are natural attractions for me for the Bow River ridings—it's my hometown—but my choice will have to be made for the benefit of the party and of the other members.

"There are no other options for some of the Alberta candidates and of course the riding I choose should be one that I can serve comfortably."

Clark's home town of High River will be included in the Bow River riding.

Both Clark and Schumacher were in Calgary Tuesday but no meeting was planned.

In a telephone interview Schumacher said he got the impression Clark was looking seriously at Yellowhead constituency.

"I think he's probably got information it would be a pretty tough battle in Bow River."

Schumacher said that if the 36-year-old Conservative leader did run against him, he had no doubt about the outcome.

"I don't think there is any question that I'd win," he said. "The local Conservatives who work in the party have been contacting me and saying I should run."

He conceded that a confrontation between himself and Mr. Clark might hurt the party in the next election, but said he won't back down.

"There just shouldn't be this confrontation."

Act overhaul reduced jobless totals

OTTAWA (CP) — The 1971 overhaul of the Unemployment Insurance Act helped reduce the jobless rate in 1973 by almost one percentage point, a study released Tuesday by the Economic Council of Canada shows

The study, prepared for the council by four authors, says if the revisions had not been made, employment would have been 30,000 less than it was in 1972 and 112,000 less in 1973.

The council says in a news release the study does not necessarily reflect its views. The council is a federal advisory body.

In addition to the effects on employment, the revisions helped increase the real growth rate of the economy by seven-tenths of one per cent and five-tenths of one per cent in 1972 and 1973 respectively, the study says.

The report also says five programs developed by Ottawa in the late 1960s and early 1970s together were more effective than tax cuts would have been in stimulating the economy and providing jobs because they had an immediate impact

The five programs, in addition to the unemployment insurance revisions, were the Canada Manpower Training Program, the Local Initiatives Program, Opportunities for Youth and the Canada Manpower On-the-Job Training Program.

But the study concludes that while the new Unemployment Insurance Act—which expanded coverage of the work force — was clearly expansionist, results would have been the same if the government had reduced personal income tax by the amount equal to benefits paid by the government.

The additional $2.5 billion in personal income achieved by reducing taxes would have been used to stimulate the economy through higher investment and consumption.

The four authors of the study are Peter Cook and Cyril Hodgins of Canadians Economic Services Ltd., Ottawa; Gregory Jump, Institute for Quantitative Analysis, University of Toronto, and Charles Szabo of the University of Montreal.

Kamloops 'tactics' criticized

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Kamloops has been criticized for its expropriation tactics in an arbitrator's report by lawyer Merv Chertkow which was filed before the B.C. Supreme Court.

The report said the city in its tactics and position "meets neither the test of fairness nor the test of furthering the interests of justice."

The report formed part of a judgment in favor of Antonio Tremolada, who appealed the city's payments for parts of six lots expropriated for the widening of a city street

The arbitrator's report said the city must pay Tremolada $15,500 for the expropriated property. The city had originally offered to pay $9,150, despite two appraisals conducted under the city's auspices which cited a substantially higher land value for the property.

"It is not the duty of the city . . to attempt to pay the least possible compensation to the claimants, but to pay due compensation to the claimants . . the claimants are entitled to at least the kind of consideration that a defendant would be entitled to from a prosecutor . . whether it is in the interests of the prosecution or otherwise," the report stated.

The city also was assessed costs of the judgment.

Sun shines in Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sun Publishing Co. Ltd. reports net profit for the six months ended June 30 of $2.6 million compared with $1.5 million for the similar period in 1975.

Income was $3.49 for each Class A share and $3.44 for each Class B share compared with $2.06 and $2.01 respectively.

Total income for the 1976 period was $2.9 million, $1 million more than in the first six months of 1975.

CASHIER-CLERK W

Welcome to CKVU, UHF Channel 26 in Vancouver, which is to start test programming this morning with some neat old movies.

Victoria Cablevision hopes to show the tests on Cable 13 but power may be too low, so the only thing to do is check this schedule, which is subject to change:

10 a.m., Laurel and Hardy; 2 p.m., movie Canon Serenade; 3:30, Androcles and the Lion (1952) with Alan Young and Jean Simmons; 7 p.m., Summertime (1955) with Katharine Hepburn; 8:40, Pygmalion (1938) with Leslie Howard and Wendy Hiller; 10:10, Fellini's 8½. Good stuff there.

Channel 12 has been on Cable 3 and Cable 12 since noon Monday, in preparation for the appearance of French-language CBUFT on Cable 3 later this month. Then, Channel 12 will be on Cable 12 only.

Bureau of Useless Information: Tuesday's answer—The Girl from Ipenema's status as a runaway song hit some years back was mainly due to a fine recording by singer Astrud Gilberto and tenor saxophone great Stan Getz. Their popularity ended too soon.

Today's question—Two of the most famous characters in all of fiction are Constance MacKenzie and her daughter Allison. Name the original book, the author and the actresses who portrayed mother and daughter in the first movie and on TV. Answers Thursday.

"Here's a bulletin just handed me: 'Your tie is crooked.'"

Wednesday highlights

5:00 p.m.—Baseball, Los Angeles at Montreal. Should be a sports section today because half of the highlights belong there—2, 6.

6:00—CFL football, Calgary at Winnipeg—8.

8:00—PBS Wednesday Evening starts with jazz pianist Keith Jarrett. At 9 p.m., the inter-racial drama Brother to Dragons, and at 10:30, poet John Berryman—9.

9:00—The newest Oral Roberts special—6.

9:30—CTV repeats a look at 20th Century-Fox movies—8.

10:00—An hour about Unsolved Mysteries like the Bermuda Triangle, pyramids and maybe even why such programs are made—6.

10:30—NFL and CFL players meet in the second flag football final at Toronto. The NFL won last year, 19-7—11.

11:30—First of almost daily CBS reports on the U.S. tennis open. Late movies will be delayed for almost two weeks—7, 12.

NOTE: Cable 10 has Wednesday off, as usual.

Wednesday movies

12:45 noon—C'mon, Let's Live a Little (ridiculous 1967 rock rot), Bobby Vee, Jackie Shannon. Isn't civilization grand? More people saw this junk than read Walter Lippman in a year—8.

1:00 p.m.—Career (strained, sappy 1959 inside-showbiz turkey), Dean Martin, Tony Franciosa, Shirley MacLaine. Thanks to movies, Martin will be a 21st-century folk hero and Lippman will be forgotten—11.

3:00—Battle of the Bulge (so-so 1966 war epic, conclusion), Fonda, friends and enemies. Matilda just asked if Lippman was a soup—5.

9:00—Conquest of the Planet of the Apes (1972). Don't think I go ape only for Lippman, so long as there's Art Buchwald—7.

11:30—Louis Armstrong, Chicago Style (not much 1975 history-twisting). Ben Vereen was a terrific Bert Williams but Satchmo he ain't—4.

11:45—Shadow in the Street (mostly dull 1975 x-con turns parole agent), Tony Lo Bianco. Another crashed pilot—12.

12:00—The Victim (first-rate 1962 Joseph Losey troubled-man drama), Dirk Bogarde, Dennis Price. By far today's best—2.

12:00—Between Midnight and Dawn (good 1950 old-style police actioner), Edmond O'Brien, Mark Stevens, Gale Storm. Little budget and lots of corn but still worth seeing once—8.

12:30 a.m.—Ride to Hangman's Tree (bearable 1966 western), Jack Lord, James Farentino. Take the train—7.

2:00—Ride the Wild Surf (1964 Fabian sinker). Come to think of it, Walter Lippman wasn't a real pace-setter; he couldn't hang 10—8.

2:40—The Jokers (okay 1970 Crown Jewels theft comedy), Oliver Reed, Michael Crawford, lovely Harry Anders. Anyway, if the 21st century forgets Lippman, it may also ignore Topo Gigio and Henry Kissinger—7.

Wednesday radio

NOTE: CJVI (900) will have any Victoria Bates games at the Canadian fastball finals but times were uncertain at my deadline.

8:00 p.m.—Concern examines Chilean fascism and domestic violence in Vancouver—CBU (690).

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the stop your ad as soon as you get using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, greatest reader attention by the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call:

Grants to assist senior housing

Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation has approved funds totalling $2,501,331 to Victoria Senior Citizens' Housing Society for a seven-storey apartment building for the elderly

The Victoria CMHC office announced Tuesday that the federal government would grant $273,296 to the project, reducing the amount outstanding to $2,228,035.

In addition, a federal interest-reduction grant of $1,290 a month will reduce the effective interest rate on the mortgage from 10½ to eight per cent.

Construction of the building, containing 71 bachelor units, 27 one-bedroom suites and a caretaker suite, on a Collinson site leased from the province, will take about 14 months.

Rents will range from $225 to $330 a month, including refrigerator, stove, utilities, laundry equipment and Cablevision.

Victoria Senior Citizens' Housing Society already operates three residential projects comprising 140 units for the elderly.

No. 222 — 118th Year | VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1976 | 15c Daily, 30c Sunday

Delinquent delivered to 'guardian' as judge's shock waves spread

'He was scared—just like I was'

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

He was 13 years old, looked nine and, flanked by two burly Sheriff's officers, was obviously bewildered and stunned by it all.

His juvenile record of "delinquencies," a long one involving theft, damage to property and a high-speed car chase, had led him to Victoria at 11:45 a.m. Tuesday, the central figure in an unprecedented court decision by Nanaimo Judge Stanley Wardill.

It was Wardill, frustrated by the never-ending parade of juvenile delinquents through his court and the lack of government action to correct a deteriorating situation, who had imposed a $250 fine on the legal guardian of the child and ordered the same guardian to pay $50 to the Salvation Army in Nanaimo for damage done to property.

It was Wardill, who having pronounced the fine, had also ordered that the child, in the custody of two sheriff's officers, be "delivered personally" to his legal guardian.

And it was Victor Belknap, superintendent of child welfare in British Columbia, who now put his arm around the shoulders of the diminutive youngster and ushered him into his office.

Legally Belknap is the guardian to the 7,000 trouble-plagued youngsters in care of B.C. Legally he is the guardian to an average 200 youngsters before the courts at any one time.

He has no say in the selection of the children placed in his care. That decision also comes from the courts after all other methods within the courts, the probationary service and the family, have failed.

The court makes the order that the delinquent who shows little signs of correcting a downward spiral be placed in the care of the superintendent of child welfare.

Until Monday, it had always been assumed that following such a court order "the office of the superintendent" became the guardian. Wardill didn't accept that interpretation. He made the superintendent personally the guardian.

Belknap has paid the fine with a personal cheque. And the damages. Now he's wondering about tomorrow.

Will Wardill's decision be isolated, just designed to force the government to look at a specific problem?

Or will it be regarded as a precedent by other frustrated judges?

"I have to be concerned about that," Belknap said Tuesday. "I haven't gone as far as to transfer all of my assets to my wife's name, but I have come close to doing that.

"And I have suggested to the minister in a letter that it might be better for me to resign a least until this thing is cleared up."

Angry dealers go to AIB over hike-plus

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

The gas price increase has come with an even bigger jolt than the hapless B.C. motorist expected and the federal Anti-Inflation Board is going to hear about it — from its own dealers.

With the public geared for an increase of five to six cents a gallon, Imperial Oil Ltd. set the stage Tuesday for what amounts to hikes of 7.3 cents in the wholesale price of regular gas and 7.4 cents for premium Service station operators can charge even more.

Some of the company's own dealers on Vancouver Island and in Vancouver were among those complaining that the AIB authorized increases of only 5.7 cents.

Imperial Oil — one of three major companies announcing increases Tuesday — offers a somewhat complicated explanation of how it is staying within the guidelines.

But AIB representatives on the West Coast remained confused and sought an answer from the board

"We've received quite a few complaints today and I intend to call Ottawa in the morning to see just what the board's position is," said Jackie Watt, a senior AIB complaints and inquiries officer in Vancouver.

"A number of the complaints have come from dealers," Mrs. Watt told the Colonist.

Whatever the case, the long-feared dollar-a-gallon prices will now become a reality in northern B.C

Things weren't that bad in Greater Victoria, although the hodge-podge of increased prices at the pump ranged all the way up to eight cents a gallon Tuesday.

The majority of dealers appeared to be holding the price line until their current supply is replaced, or until they are advised to boost the rate.

But that situation isn't expected to last more than a day or two.

"We aren't going to change the price until we pump what we've got in the ground," said a spokesman for Burnside Esso Service "It wouldn't seem fair to make the change until we get a new load at the new price."

Others said much the same thing. But the prices that did increase Tuesday moved up

Dublin seeks sweeping powers

DUBLIN (Reuter) — Prime Minister Liam Cosgrave asked the Irish parliament Tuesday to declare a state of emergency and give his government sweeping new powers to combat terrorism.

Opening a debate on proposed emergency powers, Cosgrave said the new laws were needed because crimes by men of violence had brought "discredit to the name of Irishmen throughout the world."

"Let the message go out clearly from here today that the Irish people, through their elected representatives, their democratic government and their security forces, are pledged to break and rid our country once and for all of this conspiracy of hate and evil," he said.

The appeal for a state of emergency — opposed by the opposition Fianna Fail party — is likely to be approved by parliament. A state of emergency would give the government's proposed laws immunity from challenge on constitutional grounds.

The draft legislation includes authority for police to hold guerrilla suspects without charge for up to seven days instead of 48 hours; sweeping new powers of search and arrest for troops and police; and an increase in the maximum penalty for membership in the outlawed Irish Republican Army to seven years from two years in prison.

The measures are primarily aimed at controlling the violent IRA campaign to unite the Irish Republic with British-ruled Northern Ireland.

Cosgrave said the government decided to act after the assassination of British ambassador Christopher Ewart-Biggs outside Dublin last month.

Jack Lynch, leader of the Fianna Fail, said his party would support the government in "reasonable and appropriate" steps to combat terrorism, but that the current situation did not justify a state of emergency.

"We believe it will do nothing to prevent crimes of this nature or bring about the detection and prosecution of those responsible," Lynch said

Huge second blast kills 3 firemen

GADSDEN, Ala. (UPI) — A gasoline tanker exploded at a service station Tuesday, and after firemen and spectators rushed to the scene a second, three-block blast killed three of them and injured 28 other persons.

Authorities identified two of the dead as Fire Chief Ralph Spear and Fireman Mike Thornton. The third fireman was not identified immediately.

All three were inside the service station when the second blast destroyed it, police said.

The initial explosion was apparently set off by static electricity from a tanker driver's clothing, authorities said.

Firemen and spectators arrived and were caught in what one witness said was a "massive" blast that sent flames "hundreds of feet in the air." The explosion covered three acres, authorities said.

Police said that in addition to the demolished service station and tank truck, the blast destroyed a fire truck, two mobile homes in a nearby area, two other large trucks, five vans and three cars, all of which were parked.

Bennett blasts protest

'Foolish move'

Premier Bennett said Tuesday the Oct. 14 nationwide work stoppage called by the Canadian Labor Congress to protest federal anti-inflation legislation was "a foolish, counter-productive and wasteful move."

He said if labor wanted to make gesture on that day, each person could donate a day's pay and use it in a "significant social gesture," rather than lowering productivity.

Hearst companions get 11 years to life

LOS ANGELES (AP) — William and Emily Harris, one-time fugitive travelling companions of newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst, were sentenced Tuesday to indeterminate prisons terms of 11 years to life on convictions of kidnapping, robbery and car theft.

Superior Court Judge Mark Brandler, who had listened to more than an hour of emotional statements from the Harrises and their lawyers, said he felt there was no reason for leniency "considering the gravity of the offences committed"

The Harrises were impassive as the sentences were pronounced. They had declared earlier that they did not expect justice or understanding for their revolutionary ideals.

The couple declined to stand for sentencing.

At the end of an angry speech just before sentencing, Harris had declared: "Judge Brandler, you can bring on the jugglers and the dancing bears and get this charade over with."

Brandler said the Harrises had shown they were prepared and had indeed threatened to kill their victims, if neccessary, during the crime spree

William Harris, 31, and his wife, 29, were sentenced on five counts of kidnapping and theft arising out of a Los Angeles sporting goods store shooting in which Miss Hearst was also involved.

In a 20-minute speech addressed to the small crowd consisting mostly of reporters sitting behind a bullet-proof screen in the courtroom, rather than to Brandler, Mrs. Harris said:

"I am a revolutionary and I have never lost my hopes for

Doctors approve needles

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons has approved the general use of acupuncture by member physicians.

College registrar Dr. William McClure, writing in the September issue of the B.C. Medical Journal, says the college has lifted its rule limiting use of acupuncture to study and research.

He says doctors should take an acceptable course of study in acupuncture before using it, and should be aware of possible hazards, such as the danger to cardiac patients of using electrical stimulating currents.

Guerrillas stage biggest attack

SALISBURY (UPI) — Rocket and mortar-equipped black guerrillas screaming war cries through megaphones attacked a Rhodesian camp near the Mozambican border in what government sources Tuesday called the biggest guerrilla attack of the four-year border conflict.

A military communique withheld most details on the Monday attack, but said "some casualties" were suffered. It specifically mentioned six wounded troopers.

The communique said troops killed 22 guerrillas in the past three days, bringing to 58 the number slain in the past week. It was one of the highest guerrilla death tolls in such a period since the war began in December, 1972.

Military sources said Rhodesian troops pursued the guerrillas who carried out Monday's attack. The sources said the possibility was not excluded that government troops would go into Mozambique after them.

Government sources called the attack the biggest single guerrilla action of the war.

Reports from Umtali said the camp was a partially completed base 90 miles north of the border city.

The reports said the attack began before dawn Monday with a 45-minute rocket and mortar barrage on the camp. Then the guerrillas launched a ground assault with small arms, some screaming war cries through bullhorns.

The attack came during a week of escalation in guerrilla warfare, with Rhodesia publishing figures indicating 1,577 guerrillas had been killed since the war began, 964 this year.

One day in jail imposed on electrical Robin Hood

MONTREAL (CP) — A 24-hour visit to jail was the penalty imposed Tuesday on a modern-day Robin Hood who reconnected electricity to welfare recipients whose power had been cut off because they failed to pay their bills.

Jean Pilon, of the Aid to Fire and Flood Victims organization, was sentenced by Judge Claude Joncas after pleading guilty last May to stealing four Hydro-Quebec meters and diverting $131.52 worth of electricity.

Pilon explained that he had planned to return the meters to Hydro-Quebec, his aim being to help the company understand that some people on welfare did not have enough money to pay their bills.

He used knife blades to reconnect the current after the four meters had been sealed by Hydro - Quebec, between Oct. 19 and Dec. 4, 1975.

Last January, Pilon and his group were ordered to stop restoring gas service to homes cut off for nonpayment of bills. He admitted service had been restored to about 30 homes.

Mexico floats peso after 22 years

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The Mexican government announced Tuesday night that it had decided to let the peso float freely, abandoning the 22-year-old rate of 12.5 pesos to the U.S. dollar

The surprise announcement was made by Treasury Secretary Mario Ramon Beteta, who said the change would go into effect immediately. It ended months of government denials that the currency would be devalued.

"The floating will be regulated in such a way that the indications of the market will have to establish the new exchange rate," Beteta said

ANDY CAPP

"I haven't had the full opportunity to discuss the situation with my minister, but I hope to some time this week," Belknap said. "I suppose I am reacting in a very personal way to the judge's decision. But in this office we must operate on a trust relationship with the courts. And I just feel that I must now lay myself open to examination by the provincial cabinet.

"I'll admit that more mundane aspects play a part. The whole question of liability comes into being for the first time."

Belknap said requests for reimbursement had been made to him before, but never by the courts.

"It isn't long ago that one of your (reporter) colleagues came to me to ask me for $50 because a four-year-old had scratched his car with a nail," he said with a smile. "Now one judge has said I am responsible for the actions of any juvenile placed in my care by the courts."

Wardill's decision has left the entire child welfare department in shock. They know, perhaps better than the judge, what the problems are. But they also know that they lack the power to correct whatever deficiencies exist.

Now, while waiting for the politicians to satisfy the demands of the courts, they sit exposed — to what?

"We are just as bewildered as the youngsters," Gilmore said. "This has never happened before. We're a little shocked by it all, and we don't fully understand the implications yet. Other than to know that the court has ruled the guardian, personally, can be held responsible."

Belknap himself shudders to think of the ramifications of the Wardill decision. And he guesses that child care superintendents across Canada are wondering about their futures in the wake of the Nanaimo decision.

"But I don't know what effect it will really have," he said. "The implications are tremendously serious. What they will be in full scope I just don't know."

The Wradill decision carries implications for more than Belknap.

"In the past it has been the practice of the courts to generally hold the juvenile responsible for his or her actions, not the parents," Belknap said. "In some communities parents have called for other parents to be made to pay, but the courts have stayed away from that problem."

"This is a first."

If other courts follow Wardill's lead, the parents of juveniles could, by court order, be forced to pay compensation for damage caused by their children.

That concerns Belknap and his staff. But not half as much as the question: "Who will take the job of superintendent if the Nanaimo decision establishes a precedent?"

The juvenile who has tossed himself and the child welfare division into the storm of controversy spent 15 minutes in Belknap's office after he was turned over by the sheriff's officers.

Belknap greeted him, face to face with "Hi, let's go in here and have a chat."

After the conversation Belknap escorted the boy to a waiting car where he was to be taken, "like any other juvenile in our care," to a Greater Victoria foster home. Gilmore said there was no guarantee the foster home would work. "We'll have to wait and see whether he will accept it or not, just as we always have to wait," he said.

"Scared, just like I was," answered the superintendent.

The Imperial gallon

anywhere from three to eight cents a gallon.

The way was paved Monday by the B.C. Energy Commission for the new inflationary bite of the motorist's dollar. The commission decided to remove price guidelines and open the door to increases approved by the AIB.

The first three oil companies responded quickly Tuesday with Gulf Oil announcing a six-cent-a-gallon boost in wholesale price, Chevron Canada coming in at 5.7 cents and Imperial at 5.6 cents.

But the Imperial story didn't end there.

A company spokesman in Vancouver, offering what he said would be a "technical and involved explanation," admitted the wholesale price was really going to 7.3 cents (regular) and 7.4 cents (premium) because of an additional 1.7-cent feature.

This was the former dealer "price allowance" per gallon — actually a subsidy from the company — which the spokesman says is to be withdrawn.

What it actually means is that Imperial is no longer willing to put up the 1.7 cents and the customer is going to have to take over.

However, the spokesman said there is "likely" to be a new support program for the dealers. This would be needed, he said, because "there is a very competitive market right now and that has to be recognized."

The energy board's decision allows the industry to deal in prices that were actually approved some time ago by the AIB, he said.

"What this meant in the past (B.C. freeze) is that B.C. worked on a different scale," the spokesman said. "Distortions crept into the picture and we are now going to try and even things out.

"The decision Monday puts us back in a position which is consistent with the rest of the provinces."

Transport Minister Jack Davis said Tuesday the energy commission will continue to monitor prices but will no longer set guidelines.

NAATO testing backup power

COPENHAGEN (UPI) — A military exercise involving 80,000 troops from NATO bases around the Atlantic, Europe and the English Channel will take place Sept. 10-23.

Team Work 76 will test American-European logistical backup for the first time with 200 warships, 30 submarines and 300 planes from the United States, Canada, Belgium, Denmark, Britain, Holland, Norway, Portugal and West Germany.

Oak Bay man Lucky Leo

An Oak Bay man was one of four British Columbians who won $1,000 Tuesday in the second early bird draw of the Lucky Leo lottery held in Nanaimo.

Seven other Victorians were also winners in the draw.

Jean Alder of 350 Douglas was one of five $100 winners while Marjorie Lindsay-Dixon of 2135 McLaren in Oak Bay and E. L. Halliday of 1530 Church in Saanich were among 15 winners of $50 prizes.

Four of the 40 winners of $25 were Betty Wittcher of 4112 Tuxedo in Saanich, Fenton Oldham of 361 Irving in Victoria, William Henly of 1143 Chapman in Victoria and Bud Curry of 2500 Florence Lake in Saanich.

All eight will have their tickets returned to the barrel for the Oct. 31 draw in which the first prize will be $100,000.

The Lucky Leo lottery is sponsored by the B.C. Lions society for Crippled Children.

Harrises sentenced

"I will not stoop so low as to ask Brandler for mercy."

Harris said the violence he saw in Vietnam turned his stomach, but he came back from military service still a non-violent idealist.

"We are being sent to prison because our ideas are a threat to the way the present social order is visualized," Harris said.

The 22-year-old newspaper heiress, who was later won over to the views of the SLA, went into hiding for 16 months with the Harrises after the sporting goods store incident, and faces trial next January on the same charges.

Miss Hearst opened up with two bursts of machine-gun fire from a van across the street to free the Harrises after employees of the sporting goods store accused them of shoplifting and tried to arrest them.

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am to have surgery for removal of the thymus gland. I have not been able to find out much about this surgery, but what I have heard sounds encouraging. My thymus is enlarged. Can you explain? — R.W.

There is much we don't know about this strange little gland. It is located just above the heart.

We do know that it increases in size from birth to puberty, then sort of "shrivels up" almost completely in adults. Its main role thus seems to be in the early years of life. It is important in the development of the body's lymph system and general immunity.

The thymus is quite active, even during the fetal months. It has even been suggested that one reason pregnant women seem to enjoy general good health during pregnancy is because of the activity of the fetus's thymus, which apparently secretes an important hormone.

Although it decreases in size in most adults, the thymus can develop cysts or other growths. It has been associated with myasthenia gravis (a nerve-muscle disorder). Removal of the thymus has been reported as successful in 80 per cent of myasthenia gravis patients.

Your letter doesn't offer any clues as to the reason for removal. Because the gland appears to have done most of its work in pre-puberty years, removal can be done safely.

Single witness heard in three-day session

The hearing was adjourned until Sept. 23, after three days and only one witness. Much of last week's argument was taken up with determining the exact date when the province expropriated the 60-foot-by-123-foot property owned in 1974 by De Montigny Enterprises Ltd.

Still to be heard, according to arbitrator Eric Charman, a local realtor, are five other witnesses to help the board determine the value of the property included in a government office and parking building under construction on Blanshard.

Lottery prizes keep on coming

It's almost getting to the point in the Victoria police and court centre on Fisgard and Centennial Square that a lottery prize is guaranteed by joining a group to buy a ticket.

A group of 15, including persons working in the complex and friends, learned Tuesday that one of the 15 $10 tickets they bought in Sunday's final Olympic lottery came through for a $500 prize.

The odds-shattering string of lottery victories began in February with a $250,000 Western prize for members of the Victoria Police Mutual Benefit Association. Next, in May, 28 persons in the provincial court half of the complex at 625-633 Fisgard won $500 in the Olympic draw.

Third, a second group of 46 court employees and others captured $50 in a Western draw in July. Fourth, the group of 28, who had spent their May $500 on 50 $10 Olympics tickets for the draw last Sunday, cashed in two of the 50 for $100 each.

Sgt. John Burdyny, Victoria police liaison officer in court, shared in the first four groups, but wasn't in the group of 15, which was centred in the prosecution office at 30 Centennial Square.

However, the new lucky group included one policeman who's in the $250,000 bunch and one court employee in both earlier groups of 28 and 46.

All money is being reinvested in tickets for the next Western and first Loto Canada draws, and members of the various groups expect to keep winning forever, the way their luck is going.

Rezoning

The Colonist mistakenly reported in its Tuesday edition that a rezoning application submitted by a local developer and approved by Saanich council was for 26 duplexes in the Fremont Street and Majestic Drive area.

Better facility possible within two years

Issue of Qualicum Airport remains up in the air

Colonist Correspondent

QUALICUM BEACH — The Qualicum Airport could be closed down within two years and be replaced with a better facility in a more suitable location. The site of the present airport would then be used for a housing subdivision and the sale of the lots would finance the development of the new airport.

Ald. Arthur Skipsey of Qualicum Beach, who is chairman of the municipal airport committee, has discussed the proposals with officials of the lands management branch of the provincial government's department of the environment. If the airport committee can find a suitable tract of crown land within a few miles of Qualicum Beach, the department may be prepared to sell it to the village for $25.

SKIPSEY SAID government officials told him the village should develop the subdivision on the site of the present airport once the new one is in operation. He said council could hire a firm of consultants to study the area and make recommendations, then proceed with the subdivision.

Ald. Gordon Hood of the Parksville village council, also a member of the airport committee, disagreed. He said the site should be turned over to a private developer because it would be too big a project for the village council.

SKIPSEY WOULD like to see a decision on whether or not to proceed with the proposals for the new airport made by the end of October. The village has been considering a November referendum on a paving project for the present there would be no point in the paving.

During the last year there has been considerable controversy over the airport and a $175,000 grant the federal government has offered the village to assist with paving the airstrip. Users of the airport wanted the village to go ahead with the paving and got more than 400 signatures on a petition supporting this.

MANY RESIDENTS near the airport opposed any further development of the facility because of noise, and have presented council with a petition against the paving. The council's solution was to put the time of the municipal election in November.

Contention has also been caused on occasions during the last 10 years by people trespassing on property adjacent to the airport and cutting down or blasting trees without owners' permission. The tall trees could have presented a hazard to aircraft during takeoff and landing.

Skipsey has asked transport ministry officials in Vancouver to visit the area and look at possible sites for a new airport.

If the village obtains a large tract of crown land for the airport — and there is crown land at each end — officials of the environment department have assured Skipsey there would be no problem obtaining flightway easements.

These easements are required so trees can be cut down or topped before they become a hazard to low-flying aircraft during takeoff and landing.

Skipsey said the village will have to get a firm of consultants to study the present airport and make recommendations on its development as a housing subdivision.

He said servicing would be a problem as there was no water system or suitable wells in the area. Sewage disposal could also be a problem because no sewer lines are planned to run anywhere near the airport.

Skipsey said provincial government officials told him the village would have to annex the area by Qualicum Beach. The property is owned by the municipality but it is separated from the eastern boundary by approximately a quarter of a mile. Skipsey did not know if annexation would involve incorporating the area into the village.

The airport committee discussed various aspects of ownership and operation of the proposed airport. There are many unanswered questions. Nobody knows at present if Qualicum Beach would own it or if some other authority would take it over. Nobodyt knows who would operate the airport.

The committee also has to work out some way of financing the development of the new airport until money can be obtained from the sale of lots in the subdivision.

Bates topple first two rivals in quest for another crown

The B.C. champions scored two victories Tuesday in the opening-round action, deefating Uranium City, N.W.T., Steelers, 5-2, and Lethbridge Miners, 8-0, to take the early lead in the tournament's Red Division.

Third-baseman John Green, most valuable player in the recent B.C. playoffs, cracked two hits, drove in a run and scored a run for Bates in the opeining game and catcher Bob Burrows contributed two doubles.

Dave Ruthowsky scattered six hits in earning the victory. He struck out six batters.

In the evening game, centrefielder Reg Underwood was the slugging hero. belting a pair of triples and a single and scoring three runs. The hardhitting outfielder came around to score on each of the triples as the Alberta club committed errors on each play.

Leftfielder Norm McLeod, added by Bates for the week-long championship, cracked a leadoff home run in the fourth inning to cap the scoring.

Bates provided Andy Konopacki with a big cushion, scoring three runs in the first and third innings and a single run in the second, and the fireballing righthander struck out nine batters while allowing only two hits.

Bates, who went on to earn a share of the world championship after winning the national title in 1975, will meet Dartmouth Dairy Queen of Nova Scotia this afternoon at 3:30 Victoria time and manager Joe Patterson is expected to start the third member of his pitching corps, Stan "The Colonel" Kern.

In other action Tuesday, Saskatoon blanked New Brunswick All-Stars, 2-0, and crushed Manitoba All-Stars, 11-2, to take the Blue Division lead.

And Laval Renaud of Gatineau, Que., came up with the day's outstanding individual performance, hurling a no-hit, no-run game to power Quebec to a 10-0 decision over Charlottetown. Renaud issued two bases on balls in facing only two extra batters.

In the day's only extra-inning action, Toronto Globals, the Ontario champions, went nine innings before topping Manitoba, 4-2. Pete Landers, a member of Bates in the drive to the world championship at Lower Hutt, N.Z., earned the victory, relieving starter Reg Martins in the sixth inning.

And Niagara Falls Dugouts blanked Argentia, (Nfld.) Seals, 6-0, with Steve Atkinson, a member of Birmingham Bulls of the World Hockey Association, blasting a homer and triple for the host team for the tournament.

In the last game of the night, Keith Jollimore and Cliff Surrett combined on a one-hitter as Dartmouth humbled the Yukon All-Stars, 12-0. Gerald Dickey drove in five runs for Nova Scotia with a double and a homer.

Round-robin play continues until Saturday afternoon when the top two teams from each division will enter the double-knockout championship round.

The championship round concludes with three, and if necessary, four games on Sunday.

Interception preserves win

EDMONTON (CP) — Linebacker Dale Potter intercepted a pass deep in his own territory with 64 seconds remaining and saved a 5-1 victory Tuesday night for Edmonton Eskimos over Hamilton Tiger-Cats in a Canadian Football League interlocking game.

Garry Lefebvre punted the ball out of danger three plays later and the Eskimos ended a string of successive losses at two.

Dave Cutler handled all the scoring for Edmonton with a 37-yard field goal in the second quarter and singles of 16 and 31 yards in the last half.

Ken Clark opened scoring for the Tiger-Cats midway through the second quarter when a 25-yard field goal attempt went wide for a single before a crowd of 25,461, which had little opportunity to get excited.

The victory boosted Edmonton into a tie with Saskatchewan Roughriders for first place in the Western Conference while Hamilton remained in the Eastern Conference cellar.

Most of the excitement — until the last few minutes — was provided by Edmonton's Joe Hollimon, when he scooted 94 yards with Clark's long punt for an apparent touchdown, but the gain was nullified by a holding penalty.

Both starting quarterbacks, Tom Wilkinson of Edmonton and Jimmy Jones of the Tiger-Cats, were relieved after the half. Bruce Lemmerman took over for the Eskimos and Rick Cassata operated the Hamilton offence.

Cassata, a former Ottawa Rough Rider, called only three running plays in the last half for a net gain of two yards.

A strong Hamilton defence left Cassata in good field position several times but he failed to provide the touchdown that would have meant victory.

Several passes were dropped and Edmonton's John Farlinger recovered a fumble midway through the fourth quarter to halt a drive.

In his first game back after an eight-month recovery from a knee injury, Edmonton halfback Roy Bell rushed for 39 yards in 11 carries.

Golfers in select field boast 269 tour wins

The 16 players who make up the field in the Lady Scott Invitational golf tournament to be held at the Victoria Golf Club Sept. 13-14 have won a total of 269 tour victories in professional golf.

Leader in this category with 84 wins is 64-year-old Sam Snead who still appears regularly on the U.S. tour. Snead won his first professional tournament — the Virginia Closed Professional in 1936. His record since that time is like a road map of the professional tour, as he has won tournaments from coast-to-coast including the Masters and the Canadian Open, but never the U.S. Open.

The Lady Scott Invitational will pair teams of ladies and men in a 36-hole medal competition with the scores of each partner to be added together for the team total. The tournament features eight of the top men seniors and a like number of top pros form the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.

The pairings are: Donna Caponi Young and Tommy Bolt; Pat Bradley and Art Wall; Jocelyne Bourassa and Julius Boros; Mary Bea Porter and Doug Sanders; Sandra Post and Bob Rosburg; Laura Baugh and Sam Snead; Carol Mann and Mike Souchak; and Jan Stephenson and Stan Leonard.

Leading tournament winner among the ladies is the personable Carol Mann, who has captured 38 titles and lifetime earnings of more than $400,000 in a career that began in 1961. Among them are the Ladies U.S. Open and four titles last year.

Second in total number of titles won among the men is Vancouver's Stan Leonard with 42. Among his accomplishments in a relatively short tour career were 1958 Tournament of Champions, 1957 Greensboro Open and the 1961 Western Open. As well he played in 12 Masters tournaments twice finishing just two strokes behind the winner; twice was the individual winner in nine appearances in the World Cup; the World Golfer of the Year in 1959 and six times represented Canada in the Hopkins Team Trophy matches. He is now director of Golf at the Desert Island Golf Club in Palm Springs, Calif.

The tournament offers a total purse of $45,000 with the winning pair to split $10,000.

Tickets, which are $6 daily or $10 for the two days, are available at all local golf clubs.

Hockey league adopts new playoff format

By STAN COOPER

Most training camps don't open for a week or so but Western Canada Hockey League clubs are already considering playoffs.

League governors met this week in Calgary and came up with a formula for post-season play in addition to making a number of key decisions regarding the 12-team major junior league.

Nine teams — the top three in each of the Coast, Central and Eastern Division — will advance to the first round, which consists of a double round-robin series in each division to eliminate one club.

The two remaining teams then play a best-of-seven series with the club having the highest points total in league play having the odd-game advantage.

The three division winners move to double round-robin series to eliminate one club and the remaining two play a best-of-seven set to decide the league representative in the Memorial Cup finals, to be played in May at Vancouver's Pacific Coliseum.

Last season, 10 of the 12 teams were involved in a cumbersome playoff series and many clubs are reported to have suffered financial losses.

In other matters, the governors turned down a request from four clubs — including the Cougars — to increase the number of 20-year-old players to a maximum of two from one per team; the league will shortly hire a referee-in-chief; a committee was formed to look into expansion sites, and officials for the upcoming four-team international tournament in Alberta were named.

Cougars, New Westminster, Brandon Wheat Kings and Kamloops had asked that the matter of "over-age" players be re-considered but the governors voted 8-4 to stick with the maximum of one 20-year-old.

Ernie "Punch" McLean of New Westminster has been named coach and Del Wilson of Regina Pats will manage the WCHL entry in the four-team tournament which includes representatives from the Ontario Hockey Association major series, the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League and the Soviet Union.

League president Ed Chynoweth is handling tournament details and will announce sites and dates of games shortly. Games will be played in Calgary, Edmonton, Medicine Hat and Lethbridge in late December.

Cougar manager-coach Pat Ginnell said Tuesday he expects the team will be picked in November and will be the strongest possible club. In the 1974 world junior tournament, the WCHL team was composed of two players from each of the 12 teams.

Ginnell expects about 75 players to report to Cougar training camp at G. R. Pearkes Arena on Sept. 7 and he will again supply all players for Nanaimo Clippers of the B.C. Junior Hockey League and again send about six players to Prince Albert Raiders of the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League.

Wendy stubborn test for world champion

TORONTO — Wendy Barlow of Victoria was eliminated from the Canadian international junior tennis tournament Tuesday after dropping a 3-6, 7-5, 6-3 decision to Eva Pfaff of Germany, the world hard-court champion in the under-18 division.

Nicole Marois of Quebec City, the Canadian junior under-18 champion, defeated Japanese champion Yoshie Watanabe 6-0, 6-2 to advance to today's quarter-final action

In the boys under-18 division, Martin Lachapelle of Montreal and Colin McAlpine of Deep River, Ont., were ousted in straight sets, Lachapelle losing a 6-3, 6-1 decision to Ricardo Ycaza of Ecuador and McAlpine bowing 6-1, 6-0 to Jose Clerc of Argentina.

Weiskopf escapes further discipline

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — No disciplinary action is contemplated against Tom Weiskopf for his disqualification in last week's American golf tournament, commissioner Deane Beman of the Professional Golfers' Association tour said Tuesday.

"The disqualification of a player for a violation of a rule of golf is a frequent occurrence on the tour," Beman said in a prepared statement.

"It is unfortunate that the media would seize on a common occurrence to imply that any player should be disciplined for a violation of a rule of golf beyond the penalties prescribed in the rules."

Weiskopf was diswualified for playing the 18th hole of the third round Saturday after the siren had blown calling the players off the course because of an approaching thunderstorm. His playing partners Danny Edwards and Jerry Pate, did not play the hole until the following day.

The Associated Press speculated that Weiskopf, who was on probation by the PGA at the time, might be subject to further disciplinary action.

Select pro golf field set for World Series

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — The new-look World Series of Golf, designed as the tour's answer to the World Series, the Super Bowl and the Stanley Cup, makes its maiden appearance under an expanded and enriched format Thursday.

"Golf has long suffered from the lack of a climactic, season-ending event," said Deane Beman, commissioner of the Professional Golfers' Association.

"You have such events in other sports, baseball's World Series, football's Super Bowl. With the new World Series of Golf, we feel we now have a climax to the season, a real high point.

"We will be interested to see the reception it receives from the press, the public and the players."

He has a disciple in Tom Watson, who won the 1975 World Series when it was a four-man, 36-hole tournament.

"It's already a major tournament," Watson said. "You've got a great field, an international field, and the tournament is being played on a great golf course.

The field consists of 20 players, 16 from the American tour and the winners of four foreign orders of merit. The site for the 72-hole tournament is the South course at the Firestone Country Club.

As a group, they have won 35 of the 42 events on the American tour this year and have collected more than one-third of all the money offered on the tour. The purses for tour events have totalled $6.59 million so far this season. Those 16 have combined winnings of $2.27 million.

Also in the field are Allan Henning, winner of the South African Order of Merit; Billy Dunk winner of the Australian OM; Hsu Sheng-San, winner of the Asian OM; and Takashi Murakami, winner of the Japanese OM. Neil Coles was eligible after winning the British OM but declined to compete.

Five players in the field have won before on the long, tough, 7180-yard, par-70 South course. Watson took the World Series last year. Trevino won it in 1974. Geiberger won the 1965 American golf tournament and the 1966 PGA national championship. Floyd won the 1969 American title.

And Nicklaus has won six times. He won four previous World Series, one American title and last year's PGA. The long layout ranks as, perhaps, his most happy hunting ground. He has collected more than $390,000 in winnings from this course alone.

Graham in sixth place

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Australian David Graham's $40,000 prize for winning the American golf tournament moved him into sixth place on the 1976 United States tour earnings list with $154,708 dollars, the Professional Golfers' Association said Tuesday.

Ben Crenshaw still leads the list with $219,201. Crenshaw won the Irish Open last week, but the $12,600 he earned does not count toward his U.S. tour total.

The top 10: 1. Crenshaw, $219,201, 2. Hubert Green, $195,654, 3. Hale Irwin, $191,427, 4. Al Geiberger, $182,184, 5. Jack Nicklaus, $161,769, 6. Graham, $154,708, 7. J. C. Snead, $147,883, 8. Jerry Pate, $142,472, 9. Don January, $140,160, 10. Ray Floyd, $131,918.

Jockey satisfactory

Ms. Airth, 21, was thrown under Lady Latimer while negotiating a first turn. Lady Latimer went down after clipping the heels of Regal Return.

On May 21, Ms. Airth became the first woman ever to ride a winner in British Columbia thoroughbred racing where parimutuel wagering is allowed.

She finished fifth in the featured ninth race Monday night on Ask The Fleet, the horse she rode to her first win. She came back in the 10th with 23-to-one shot Lady Latimer and was sitting in good position when the mishap occurred

Ms. Airth regained consciousness before leaving the track by ambulance. A hospital spokesman said Tuesday that she did not appear to have any broken bones.

NFL players table new contract offer

CHICAGO (UPI) — Player representatives of National Football League teams voted Tuesday night to table a proposal from management for a new contract.

The vote, which neither Players Association president Dick Anderson of the Miami Dolphins or executive director Ed Garvey would announce, came at the conclusion of a 10-hour meeting in which the representatives discussed and voted individually on more than 30 articles in the proposed agreement.

Garvey said the vote to table the proposal called for clarification of various points in the agreement.

"What we do will have to be discussed with players around the league," Garvey said. "The representatives felt we needed to continue bargaining."

Anderson, who negotiated the proposal with Dan Rooney of Pittsburgh Steelers, with the participation of NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle, said he "favored the proposal. I thought it was something the players could live with and deal with.

"I'm disappointed," Anderson said. "I feel it was the best offer we're going to get. Now we'll have to go further and continue to negotiate."

The executive commission of the association approved the proposal and submitted it to the player representatives and Garvey said one of the player representatives in the meeting said it was the job of the negotiators to "get the best possible offer they can get and if the representatives want to take it, they can."

Garvey and Anderson would not disclose the contents in the 70-page contract proposal and Garvey said, "If we start announcing what's troublesome it may complicate the bargaining process. You have to look at the total package."

Garvey said there was no discussion in the meeting of a possible strike nor was any date set for future negotiations.

The players have not had a contract since 1974 and played without a contract for the last two seasons with a brief strike during training camp preceding the 1974 season.

Failure of the player representatives to take a stand on the contract, which was understood to include limits on the size of team squads, probably meant the owners would have to establish squad size at a meeting scheduled in New York today.

Various points known to be included in the contract proposal specified minimum salaries, pre-season play, the application of the Rozelle Rule, moving expenses, pensions and medical insurance.

Russians won't play against Chile

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Tennis Federation has refused to play Chile, its scheduled opponent, in the next stage of the Davis Cup tennis tournament. The federation cited its "indignation with the horrible crimes committed by the Chilean military junta."

In a brief statement Tuesday carried by the Soviet news agency Tass, the federation said that "bloody terror is reigning in Chile and human rights are grossly flouted."

The Soviet Union joined Chile in the interzone semi-finals by beating Hungary earlier this month.

HOW TO FIX A WHITE ELEPHANT

It sounds like it should be big and white and wild. But strangely, a White Elephant is short and white and smooth. So smooth, and so delicious, in fact, that you'll hardly know that it has 2 oz. of liquor in it. Like all elephants, a White Elephant should always be treated with respect.

Here's all you do to mix a White Elephant: pour 1 oz. Smirnoff, 1 oz. white creme de cacao and 1 oz. milk into a short glass with ice. Stir. And enjoy the little alabaster behemoth.

Port Alberni

Optimism high for big derby

This sign at right, outside the Clutesi Haven Marina in Port Alberni, tells it all — some lucky fisherman is going to take home the top prize of $5,000 for biggest salmon caught during Labor Day weekend as part of Port Alberni Salmon Festival. With any kind of break from the weather-maker, festival committee is certain that last year's catch of more than 6,000 pounds of big salmon will be surpassed. Officials' optimism is buyoed by the fact that fishing out of Port Alberni has been excellent throughout this year. Consequently, the betting around the west coast city is that a tyee of more than 50 pounds will be needed to capture the $5,000 prize.

Signoff ahead?

Qualicum-area residents and other Vancouver Islanders are hoping this sign will be eventually gone from shoreline as $3-million-plus sewer project is finally completed, after having been held up by recent construction strike. However, for the moment, there will also be a short-term discharge of raw sewage through interceptor outfall at French Creek.

Veterans close ranks to fight for beefed-up hospital pact

By BILL SMITH
Colonist Reporter

Renegotiation of a federal-provincial Veterans' Hospital agreement and standardized medical treatment for veterans Canada-wide are major aims of the newly-formed Victoria-based Veterans' Rights Association of B.C.

The group, formed at a public meeting Sunday, is also demanding the federal government affirm the Veterans Charter and re-establish immediately, at or near Memorial Pavilion, an admission office for veterans staffed by veterans' affairs department employees.

Outpatient services

Re-establishment of outpatient services lost in the last two years is also being urged, along with greater veteran participation on the Royal Jubilee Hospital board of governors.

Briefs will be presented to federal and provincial governments asking for changes in the agreement in the next few weeks.

It was under this agreement that the former Veterans' Hospital was integrated two years ago with the provincially-run Royal Jubilee Hospital.

John Collins, 1071 Gosper Crescent, interim president of the association's five-member board of directors, said there was no doubt veterans in other parts of Canada were receiving far better medical services than in B.C.

As the Second World War veterans get older (their average age is now 59) their medical needs increase, he said.

"We need hospital beds. I just hope to God there's a place to put the boys."

Those people helping the association were, Collins said, helping to make a more humane and peaceful climate for the veteran.

He also tongue-in-cheek recognized "the assistance of doctors Hemming, Pickles, Scott Wallace and Messrs Dennis Cocke and Pierre Trudeau, especially the latter — an illustrious veteran — for assisting in forming the association."

Privileges eroded

Peter Foy, a non-practising Victoria lawyer, who with Roy Henley, Lionel Speller and James Brown make up the directorate, said it was obvious that in the transfer of veterans hospitals, the rights and privileges of veterans had been eroded.

After many days of sifting through legal documents, reports and copies of Hansard, Foy told the group he had arrived at the conclusion that the government was the trustee of the hospital and was duly bound to look after the veterans' rights.

"I am talking about rights guaranteed by legislation enacted over a great number of years by the federal government."

$3,735,000 commitment

Terms of the agreement signed two years ago called for a $3,735,000 commitment by the federal government to the province. At the time the contract was signed the B.C. government received $500,000 cash with the remainder available "when required."

Foy suggested "the $3 million plus must have looked awfully good to the newly-formed NDP government. They just couldn't wait to get their hands on the money."

The $3 million, he said, was to be used for an extension at Shaughnessy Hospital in Vancouver — for a new children's wing that was scheduled for construction.

Urging all veterans' organizations to unite in the fight to obtain "our just rights," Foy warned the problem would not go away; it would only get worse.

Admitting that the agreement could not be reversed, he suggested, however, "a united effort will be successful in getting the document completely revamped."

Foy said the Royal Canadian Legion could be faulted on many counts "but not for the fight they waged in the 1920s and 1930s to obtain rights for veterans — even to the point of getting hospitals built and staffed."

Sections of the federal-provincial agreement, especially those dealing with priority beds for veterans, were described by Foy as "absolutely worthless."

Priority beds have existed in name only since the take-over day, he charged.

"Administration of the Memorial Pavilion has been abominable," Foy said, adding "they have made a complete hash of things."

Nanaimo rescue worries

RCMP-boat pullout has council miffed

By FRED CURRIE
Colonist Correspondent

NANAIMO—The commanding officer of the Nanaimo RCMP detachment, Inspector George Strathdee, is going to be asked to explain to city council why the police boat Athabasca is being pulled out of Nanaimo.

Ald. Jim Moffat said Monday that he has learned that the 33-foot vessel will be transferred to the Sunshine Coast area of the mainland — Sechelt and Powell River — and will not likely be replaced here.

To make matters worse, Moffat said, he has learned that next summer, the Canadian Coast Guard's Zodiac and crew will not be posted to Nanaimo, as has been the case for the past several years, but, instead, will go to Northwest Bay near Parksville.

The need for full-time rescue service here was pointed up by figures Moffat released. He said that between the coast guard and members of the Nanaimo Emergency Program, 70 marine rescue incidents have been recorded to date this year.

In addition, radio station CHUB has compiled 23 incidents on the water this summer in its marine patrol vessel.

Withdrawal of both the RCMP and coast guard vessels will leave Nanaimo with only the volunteer services of the NEP and the casual participation of radio station personnel on an unofficial basis.

Moffat said that if the situation cannot be reversed, then council should make an all-out effort to have the coast guard station and a large, ocean-going rescue vessel in Nanaimo.

The alderman added that an unofficial count puts the number of all types of boats operating out of Nanaimo at 26,000.

Ald. Gino Sedola, head of the police, parking and traffic committee, has been empowered by council to begin the investigation immediately.

Search for plane reopening soon

The search for the Voodoo jet aircraft which crashed into the sea near Comox July 5, killing two men, will be reopened Sept. 13

The Esquimalt-based oceanographic vessel Endeavor will begin the search using echo-sounding equipment, side-scan sonars and other gear.

An armed forces spokesman at Comox said Tuesday the search will pose "a very, very difficult task because the wreckage lies on a tidal edge and the bottom is sand and silt."

The CF-100 jet interceptor crashed into Georgia Strait waters about two miles northeast of the Canadian Forces Base at Lazo.

The body of the pilot, Capt. Leslie Cox, 31, formerly of Ottawa, was never recovered. The body of the navigator, Capt. Roy Smith, 29, of Kelowna, was found shortly after the crash.

The plane was taking part in a formation-flying exercise with two other jets when it suddenly plummetted into the calm waters of the strait.

Many of the eyewitnesses have been interviewed and an appeal has gone out for anyone else witnessing the crash to contact the Comox base.

Grave error investigated

NANAIMO — A possible mistake in construction at the Nanaimo city cemetery is a problem city officials are going to have to sort out.

Mrs. Joanne Maguire said a search for the graves of her grandparents in the cemetery indicated a road has been built over the dedicated land.

She said her grandparents were buried there in the early 1950s but no headstones were erected

Mrs. Maguire said she obtained a copy of the blueprints of the cemetery and her suspicions were confirmed. She has turned the whole matter over to city officials.

Berth hunt goes on for Prince George

NANAIMO — The cruise ship Prince George still does not have a permanent home.

Wong Bros. Enterprises, owners of the vessel, had applied to city council for permission to park it behind the Nanaimo Foundry building in Nanaimo Harbor and operate the vessel as a restaurant and convention centre from there.

However, during a city council session Monday night, aldermen were told that several factors prohibited such move.

Firstly, the Nanaimo Foundry officials say they will not relinquish their water lease in the area and will not consider subletting the area to Wong Bros.

Another factor was a statement from members of the city's parks and recreation commission indicating that they, too, are opposed to the vessel being there, within about 300 feet of a proposed marine park behind the civic arena, next door to the foundry.

On hearing the negative replies to their application, Wong Bros. withdrew the application for the location and John Wong said his family now would give consideration to an earlier council suggestion that the vessel be located on the downtown waterfront, behind the post office building.

That area is adjacent to a site where the city is planning almost immediate construction of a multi-storey, off-street parking facility and is within easy walking distance of another major parking area.

Wong Bros. say they hope to have a decision on the location of the vessel by this weekend.

Dairy-show prize for Nanoose Bay

VANCOUVER — It was a great day for Charles Dawson and his son Sid from Nanoose Bay on Vancouver Island when a tremendous Ayrshire dairy show came to an end at the PNE recently.

Dawson Ayrshires captured both senior and reserve senior championships and saw these two animals go up to grand and reserve grand honors.

Then Dawson's foursome captured Breeder's Herd championship and he was named Premier Breeder.

Richards Farms Ltd. of Red Deer, Alta., who has dominated Ayrshire championship row at the PNE for the past two years, took Premier Exhibitor banner and showed his young bull to the championship.

Richards also had Junior Champion female and bested another Albertan, Leonard Wylie of Calgary, who was reserve in that category.

The PNE continues through Labor Day.

Scow gives new scope

NANAIMO — Leo Wells, a private towboat operator, recently built and launched a scow which can be used to move cargo to any of the many islands around here without ramp facilities.

"We built it on a wooden frame, 20 feet by 50 feet," said Wells, "with two winch-operated ramps at one end. It only draws about 10 inches of water so we can run it up on the beach for loadings or unloading. It will take four cars, a mobile home or any type of equipment."

Girl's 50-pound tyee now season's biggest

Eighteen-year-old Ann Pengelley's 50-pounder from Frenchman's Pool has taken over the lead as top fish registered this year with the Tyee Club of British Columbia at Campbell River.

Ann was using a Lucky Louie plug and 20-pound-test line.

It was the 54th fish registered with the Tyee Club this year, and takes the lead from Harry Thulin's 43.8-pounder. Thulin was guided by Ross Spiers.

Ban on sports fishing set in Cowichan Bay

Colonist Correspondent

To ensure better stocks of coho and chinook salmon, all sports fishing will be prohibited in the tidal waters of the Koksilah and Cowichan Rivers as of midnight Monday.

A federal fisheries spokesman said this closure, which will extend straight across from a boundary sign on Skinner Point in the north to a sign on the south shore of Cowichan Bay, was instituted each fall, to allow spawning salmon to return to the rivers.

He added that further information on gear and size restrictions could be obtained through the local offices of the federal fisheries service and the fish and wildlife branch in Duncan.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden Notes

Once upon a time, a farmer had a very good and hard-working hired hand whom he valued highly. After a particularly strenuous and exhausting harvesting season, he decided to reward his man by putting him on an easy, sit-down job, so he set him to work in the barn sorting potatoes, separating the larger saleable ones from the little "chats" which would be used for seed.

Halfway through the first afternoon, the man came storming to the farmer's back door. "I'm quitting," he said. "Gimme my time."

"Why, what's the matter?" asked the farmer. "I've just given you the easiest job on the whole farm."

"Easy, hell!" bellowed the hired hand. "It's decisions, decisions. The responsibility is killing me!"

For those home gardeners who like to save their own seed potatoes when lifting their crop, I should point out there is a right way and a wrong way to select those tubers for planting out next spring.

The whole idea back of selecting seed potatoes is to pick the ones which will give you the biggest crop of reasonably large, clean-skinned, shallow-eyed potatoes next year. However, the average backyard gardener will usually do just the opposite, setting aside the best of his crop to eat, and picking his next year's seed from the little ones left over. Let's see how this works out:

He goes out to dig his crop. Some of the plants are good performers, some just average, while some are definitely poor yielders. The first plant he forks up is a good one and he gets, say, six nice kitchen-size eating potatoes and two little ones. The big ones are sacked up for storage while the "chats" are set aside for seed.

Plant No. 2 is only fair, giving three usable spuds and four little ones. Plant No. 3 is a poor one and yields only one eating-size potato and six chats. Let's stop right here and see what we have in the seed box.

From the three plants we have 10 potatoes for eating and 12 small ones set aside for seed. But here is the important statistical fact: Out of those 12 seed potatoes, 10 have come from poor-yielding plants. Only two out of twelve of our seed potatoes have inherited the pototo qualities we desire, and if planted out next spring, the proportion is bound to be lower.

The same thing happens when all the potatoes are dug and gathered into storage, and a final grading is made, dividing the crop into usable potatoes and those only good enough for seed. This way, your chances of upgrading the quality of you crop are stacked against you.

The trick in grading up next year's yield lies in selecting your seed potatoes only from the best PLANTS — the ones which yield the greatest number of clean, well-formed, eating size potatoes, avoiding like the plague any plants that run to too many chats.

You can't do this after the whole crop is lifted. The only sound way is to keep a carton or basket by you as you work, and make your selection on the basis of the individual plant's performance and general health.

If I had to choose between a good-looking potato from a poor-yielding plant and a crummy-looking specimen from a plant of excellent performance, I'd pick the poor one, for at least it will have inherited the right genes. Fortunately, such a choice is seldom necessary, for a good plant will always produce enough clean, well-formed seed.

Tubers about the size of a Grade A Large breakfast egg make the best seed — when they come from the right plant. Dry them thoroughly in the sun before storing. They store best in a cool place, but unlike spuds stored for food, they don't insist on darkness. A green skin caused by exposure to light is no detriment

Jack Smith

Television's new prime-time cultural hero this fall, according to New York magazine, will be the newspaper reporter, or "newshound," to use the magazine's word. "First it was the thundering hooves of a posse of Wyatt Earps and Paladins," the item says, "then the whine of police sirens in a dozen cops-and-robbers series. This season it's be the tap-tap-tap of the city room typewriter . . "

One of the shows will centre on a love affair between an aging columnist and a young photographer; another will star Raymond Burr as editor of a newspaper chain owned by a fiftyish woman, and the third will feature a hard-digging young male investigative reporter.

I can't help feeling a certain gratification at this news. At last the newspaper reporter, so long disdained by the true professionals with whom his work often brought him into contact — lawyers, detectives, criminals, politicians — is to be admitted to their status.

This new respect for us once grubby tradesmen is plainly just another of the many fring results of Watergate, and the new image of the reporter as projected by Woodward and Bernstein in their book, and by Redford and Hoffman in the movie, All the President's Men.

Thanks is due mostly to the movie, I suppose; for no matter how hard the director tried for realism, Woodward and Bernstein were supposed to look like heroes, sort of, so they are portrayed as sober, literate and clean, if not tidy; and are not allowed to grind their cigarettes out in the carpet. There is no way you are going to make a Marcus Welby out of Carl Bernstein or Dustin Hoffman, but at least you can give the impression that if one of them rang Welby's doorbell the doctor's maid might let him in, to wait in the foyer.

We have come a long way from the days of The Front Page. But all the credit can't go to Watergate, even though it did illuminate the role of the press in keeping the government fairly honest, and show the reporter as hard-working and halfway intelligent, as well as creepy

Actually, newspaper reporters have always been like that. It wasn't their character that gave them such a bad name; it was their life-style and their philosophy. They were so poorly paid they could never quite afford suburban middle-class entanglements, and their work made them associates if not allies of quacks, shysters, con men, hookers, embezzlers, ax murderers, politicians and other reporters, and their only friends were bartenders. Naturally they devloped thin shells of cynicism to shield their mushy sentimental centres.

Back in the 1940s, I think it was, when every city room still had its Hildy Johnson, the New Yorker published a cartoon that showed half a dozen young men loitering on the steps of a college building in rumpled clothes with loosened neckties, hats on the back of their heads, and cigarettes hanging from their lips. Over the doorway was engraved the legend SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM.

That cartoon was very significant. Its point was that now, in the era after the Second World War, would-be newspaper reporters were actually going to college, but they still tried to look as if they had been pulled out of the soup line in front of the rescue mission. As it so often did in those days, the New Yorker had neatly noted a cultural trend.

So the transformation which, it appears, will soon be documented on prime time, began long before Watergate. cultural trend.

It can not be linked, either, to the increasing presence of women in the city room. A reporter is a reporter, whether man or woman. We had lots of women around when I was a young reporter and I can say for them that they were just as able, tacky and dissolute as the rest of us. (One thing different about today's women reporters is that some of them refer to themselves as "newspersons," as if the word reporter itself was either sexist or otherwise offensive. Thank God H. L. Mencken isn't alive to see "newspersons" in print.)

The change was accelerated in the 1950s with the general national affluence and the rise in a reporter's pay to rank with that of his friend the bartender. It was in this era that reporters began to go into respectable debt, acquiring automobiles and homes and even joining country clubs.

It was not long before his death in the 1950s, in fact, that Mencken himself deplored this amalgamation of his own kind into the general culture. "Why there are reporters today," he said in his one and only interview on radio, his voice gravid with revulsion, "who play golf!"

So it will be interesting to see whether this fall's ventures into the city room depict the new journalism or revert to the old, with Xaviera Hollander as a hard-digging newsperson and Telly Savalas as editor of the New York Times.

The show that interests me most, of course, is the one about the love affair between the aging columnist and the young photographer. Assuming the young photographer is a photoperson, I just might be available as a technical consultant.

Sydney Harris

Both the major U.S. political parties are less than candid about the vexing subject of "tax reform," but it must be admitted that the Republicans are more honest about it than the Democrats are. The Republicans hardly pretend to care much about anyone who isn't a certified WASP making it in an antiseptic suburb, while the Democrats shed huge crocodile tears about the tax burden on the poor.

But, realistically, it has been the Democratic majority in Congress that has steadily shied away from imposing a progressive tax on citizens, while paying lip-service to the ideal—for the eminently practical reason that no way can be found to do this that would not alienate tens of millions of middle-class voters.

In point of fact, all proposals for "tax reform" are phonies as long as they concentrate on income, and not on wealth. There are simply not enough tax monies to be derived from income alone to relieve the poor and lower middle classes.

This is a stubborn fiscal fact behind all the political double-talk. "Soaking the rich" is an absurd and hypocritical populist slogan, if it is meant in terms of annual income, because any such soaking, to be genuinely remedial, would have to be so extensive and so extreme as to cripple the economy more than reviving it.

There are simply not enough people earning enough money each year to raise the taxes that would be necessary to alleviate the plight of the lower fifth who live below or near the poverty line. If every family in the country making more than $30,000 a year were taxed a full 50 per cent, with no deductions allowed, the sum collected would hardly make a ripple in the tax structure.

"Wealth" is another matter entirely. If there were a progressive tax on net worth, rather than income, this would bring in an enormous sum that could, relieve the bottom two-fifths of taxpayers from their present burden. But there is no more chance of enacting such a law than there is of getting Congress to cut its own salaries in half.

Nor am I saying that this necessarily should be done; it may be a good or bad idea, and economists of differing faiths will argue the matter bitterly. All I am pointing out is that "tax reform" will continue to remain a sour joke unless and until the American people decide how and in what way they want the income pie redistributed.

We are merely deluding ourselves if we imagine that fiddling around with the present system will do more than provide a minor palliative. The Democratic Congress, which professes to be "for the peepul," has had a quarter-century to come up with a feasible plan, and has not even made a serious effort.

No matter what Jimmy the Grin promises if he is elected, he will be able to accomplish little more than Jerry the Grim in the way of tax reform. Jerry's only merit in this department is that he doesn't pretend to care if the bottom fifth is able to hack it at all.

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — Lunched the other day with Carol White, the beautiful blonde English actress who made such a big impact a few years ago in Poor Cow.

It was the movie that brought her to the United States in a wave of publicity — and then, all of a sudden, Carol disappeared from the scene.

Where has she been all these years?

"Living out at Malibu.

When she first came over here, she was married to British rock star Michael King. They had two sons, Sean, now 13, and Stephen, now 11.

"We're divorced now too but we're back living together."

"I stayed out of the business because I wanted to be home with my sons while they were growing up."

But now she is back in business with The Squeeze, a story in which she plays a kidnapping victim, along with Stacy Keach, David Hemmings, Edward Fox and Stephen Boyd.

"I was offered lot of parts in the last four or five years," she says, "but The Squeeze was the only one that interested me.

"I have been in the business since I was 11 — and I just got tired of playing those dim little birds. This role in The Squeeze excited me so now I'm back acting."

Carol had let her hair go to its natural chestnut color but as soon as she got back before the cameras, the edict went out to make it platinum.

"They said it wouldn't be Carol White with brown hair."

Must say she looks sensational.

She was raving about Steve Boyd's performance as the leader of the kidnap gang.

"He plays it as an Ulster man which gives it added terror. He's so convincing."

Told her he should be. Steve comes from Belfast.

"I never knew that," said Carol. "I always thought he was English."

Delinquent delivered to 'guardian' as judge's shock waves spread

'He was scared—just like I was'

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

He was 13 years old, looked nine and, flanked by two burly sheriff's officers, was obviously bewildered and stunned by it all.

His juvenile record of "delinquencies," a long one involving theft, damage to property and a high-speed car chase, had led him to Victoria at 11:45 a.m. Tuesday, the central figure in an unprecedented court decision by Nanaimo Judge Stanley Wardill.

It was Wardill, frustrated by the never-ending parade of juvenile delinquents through his court and the lack of government action to correct a deteriorating situation, who had imposed a $250 fine on the legal guardian of the child and ordered the same guardian to pay $50 to the Salvation Army in Nanaimo for damage done to property.

It was Wardill, who having pronounced the fine, had also ordered that the child, in the custody of two sheriff's officers, be "delivered personally" to his legal guardian.

And it was Victor Belknap, superintendent of child welfare in British Columbia, who now put his arm around the shoulders of the diminutive youngster and ushered him into his office.

Legally Belknap is the guardian to the 7,000 trouble-plagued youngsters in care of B.C. Legally he is the guardian to an average 200 youngsters before the courts at any one time.

He has no say in the selection of the children placed in his care. That decision also comes from the courts after all other methods within the courts, the probationary service and the family, have failed.

The court makes the order that the delinquent who shows little signs of correcting a downward spiral be placed in the care of the superintendent of child welfare.

Until Monday, it had always been assumed that following such a court order "the office of the superintendent" became the guardian. Wardill didn't accept that interpretation. He made the superintendent personally the guardian.

Belknap has paid the fine with a personal cheque. And the damages. Now he's wondering about tomorrow.

Will Wardill's decision be isolated, just designed to force the government to look at a specific problem?

Or will it be regarded as a precedent by other frustrated judges?

"I have to be concerned about that," Belknap said Tuesday. "I haven't gone as far as to transfer all of my assets to my wife's name, but I have come close to doing that.

"And I have suggested to the minister in a letter that it might be better for me to resign a least until this thing is cleared up."

The Imperial gallon

Angry dealers go to AIB over hike-plus

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

The gas price increase has come with an even bigger jolt than the hapless B.C. motorist expected and the federal Anti-Inflation Board is going to hear about it — from its own dealers.

With the public geared for an increase of five to six cents a gallon, Imperial Oil Ltd. set the stage Tuesday for what amounts to hikes of 7.3 cents in the wholesale price of regular gas and 7.4 cents for premium. Service station operators can charge even more.

Some of the company's own dealers on Vancouver Island and in Vancouver were among those complaining that the AIB authorized increases of only 5.7 cents.

Imperial Oil — one of three major companies announcing increases Tuesday — offers a somewhat complicated explanation of how it is staying within the guidelines.

But AIB representatives on the West Coast remained confused and sought an answer from the board

"We've received quite a few complaints today and I intend to call Ottawa in the morning to see just what the board's position is," said Jackie Watt, a senior AIB complaints and inquiries officer in Vancouver.

"A number of the complaints have come from dealers," Mrs. Watt told the Colonist.

Whatever the case, the long-feared dollar-a-gallon prices will now become a reality in northern B.C

Things weren't that bad in Greater Victoria, although the hodge-podge of increased prices at the pump ranged all the way up to eight cents a gallon Tuesday.

The majority of dealers appeared to be holding the price line until their current supply is replaced, or until they are advised to boost the rate.

But that situation isn't expected to last more than a day or two.

"We aren't going to change the price until we pump what we've got in the ground," said a spokesman for Burnside Esso Service. "It wouldn't seem fair to make the change until we get a new load at the new price."

Others said much the same thing. But the prices that did increase Tuesday moved up

Dublin seeks sweeping powers

DUBLIN (Reuter) — Prime Minister Liam Cosgrave asked the Irish parliament Tuesday to declare a state of emergency and give his government sweeping new powers to combat terrorism.

Opening a debate on proposed emergency powers, Cosgrave said the new laws were needed because crimes by men of violence had brought "discredit to the name of Irishmen throughout the world."

"Let the message go out clearly from here today that the Irish people, through their elected representatives, their democratic government and their security forces, are pledged to break and rid our country once and for all of this conspiracy of hate and evil," he said.

The appeal for a state of emergency — opposed by the opposition Fianna Fail party — is likely to be approved by parliament. A state of emergency would give the government's proposed laws immunity from challenge on constitutional grounds

The draft legislation includes authority for police to hold guerrilla suspects without charge for up to seven days instead of 48 hours; sweeping new powers of search and arrest for troops and police; and an increase in the maximum penalty for membership in the outlawed Irish Republican Army to seven years from two years in prison.

The measures are primarily aimed at controlling the violent IRA campaign to unite the Irish Republic with British-ruled Northern Ireland.

Cosgrave said the government decided to act after the assassination of British ambassador Christopher Ewart-Biggs outside Dublin last month.

Jack Lynch, leader of the Fianna Fail, said his party would support the government in "reasonable and appropriate" steps to combat terrorism, but that the current situation did not justify a state of emergency.

"We believe it will do nothing to prevent crimes of this nature or bring about the detection and prosecution of those responsible," Lynch said.

Huge second blast kills 3 firemen

GADSDEN, Ala. (UPI) — A gasoline tanker exploded at a service station Tuesday, and after firemen and spectators rushed to the scene a second, three-block blast killed three of them and injured 28 other persons.

Authorities identified two of the dead as Fire Chief Ralph Spear and Fireman Mike Thornton. The third fireman was not identified immediately.

All three were inside the service station when the second blast destroyed it, police said.

The initial explosion was apparently set off by static electricity from a tanker driver's clothing, authorities said.

Firemen and spectators arrived and were caught in what one witness said was a "massive" blast that sent flames "hundreds of feet in the air." The explosion covered three acres, authorities said.

Police said that in addition to the demolished service station and tank truck, the blast destroyed a fire truck, two mobile homes in a nearby area, two other large trucks, five vans and three cars, all of which were parked.

Bennett blasts protest

'Foolish move'

Premier Bennett said Tuesday the Oct. 14 nationwide work stoppage called by the Canadian Labor Congress to protest federal anti-inflation legislation was "a foolish, counter-productive and wasteful move."

He said if labor wanted to make a gesture on that day, each person could donate a day's pay and use it in a "significant social gesture," rather than lowering productivity.

Hearst companions get 11 years to life

LOS ANGELES (AP) — William and Emily Harris, one-time fugitive travelling companions of newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst, were sentenced Tuesday to indeterminate prisons terms of 11 years to life on convictions of kidnapping, robbery and car theft.

Superior Court Judge Mark Brandler, who had listened to more than an hour of emotional statements from the Harrises and their lawyers, said he felt there was no reason for leniency "considering the gravity of the offences committed."

The Harrises were impassive as the sentences were pronounced. They had declared earlier that they did not expect justice or understanding for their revolutionary ideals.

The couple declined to stand for sentencing.

At the end of an angry speech just before sentencing, Harris had declared: "Judge Brandler, you can bring on the jugglers and the dancing bears and get this charade over with."

Brandler said the Harrises had shown they were prepared and had indeed threatened to kill their victims, if necessary, during the crime spree.

William Harris, 31, and his wife, 29, were sentenced on five counts of kidnapping and theft arising out of a Los Angeles sporting goods store shooting in which Miss Hearst was also involved.

In a 20-minute speech addressed to the small crowd consisting mostly of reporters sitting behind a bullet-proof screen in the courtroom, rather than to Brandler, Mrs. Harris said:

"I am a revolutionary and I have never lost my hopes for

Doctors approve needles

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons has approved the general use of acupuncture by member physicians.

College registrar Dr. William McClure, writing in the September issue of the B.C. Medical Journal, says the college has lifted its rule limiting use of acupuncture to study and research.

He says doctors should take an acceptable course of study in acupuncture before using it, and should be aware of possible hazards, such as the danger to cardiac patients of using electrical stimulating currents.

Guerrillas stage biggest attack

SALISBURY (UPI) — Rocket and mortar-equipped black guerrillas screaming war cries through megaphones attacked a Rhodesian camp near the Mozambican border in what government sources Tuesday called the biggest guerrilla attack of the four-year border conflict.

A military communique withheld most details on the Monday attack, but said "some casualties" were suffered. It specifically mentioned six wounded troopers.

The communique said troops killed 22 guerrillas in the past three days, bringing to 58 the number slain in the past week. It was one of the highest guerrilla death tolls in such a period since the war began in December, 1972.

Military sources said Rhodesian troops pursued the guerrillas who carried out Monday's attack. The sources said the possibility was not excluded that government troops would go into Mozambique after them.

Government sources called the attack the biggest single guerrilla action of the war.

Reports from Umtali said the camp was a partially completed base 90 miles north of the border city.

The reports said the attack began before dawn Monday with a 45-minute rocket and mortar barrage on the camp. Then the guerrillas launched a ground assault with small arms, some screaming war cries through bullhorns.

The attack came during a week of escalation in guerrilla warfare, with Rhodesia publishing figures indicating 1,577 guerrillas had been killed since the war began, 364 this year.

One day in jail imposed on electrical Robin Hood

MONTREAL (CP) — A 24-hour visit to jail was the penalty imposed Tuesday on a modern-day Robin Hood who reconnected electricity to welfare recipients whose power had been cut off because they failed to pay their bills.

Jean Pilon, of the Aid to Fire and Flood Victims organization, was sentenced by Judge Claude Joncas after pleading guilty last May to stealing four Hydro-Quebec meters and diverting $131.52 worth of electricity.

Pilon explained that he had planned to return the meters to Hydro-Quebec, his aim being to help the company understand that some people on welfare did not have enough money to pay their bills.

He used knife blades to reconnect the current after the four meters had been sealed by Hydro - Quebec, between Oct. 19 and Dec. 4, 1975.

Last January, Pilon and his group were ordered to stop restoring gas service to homes cut off for non-payment of bills. He admitted service had been restored to about 30 homes.

Mexico floats peso after 22 years

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The Mexican government announced Tuesday night that it had decided to let the peso float freely, abandoning the 22-year-old rate of 12.5 pesos to the U.S. dollar

The surprise announcement was made by Treasury Secretary Mario Ramon Beteta, who said the change would go into effect immediately. It ended months of government denials that the currency would be devalued.

"The floating will be regulated in such a way that the indications of the market will have to establish the new exchange rate," Beteta said

They'll help consumers to battle computers

Following the lead of a service operating in Vancouver for two years, the Victoria Computer Ombudsman Service will attempt to help citizens who feel they have been victimized by a computer.

The Victoria chapter of the Canadian Information Processing Society approved in April the formation of a special interest group to establish a computer ombudsman service for the Vancouver Island area. Chairman of the volunteer organization is Stan Clark of the University of Victoria.

Computer problems were classified into three types by the service:

● Individual specific errors, such as a department store computer which keeps billing customers for something which had been paid for.

● Errors due to faulty design of computer systems.

● Possible future political and social problems caused by large-scale computerization.

However, the Victoria service also plans to get into "class" actions arising out of situations where a number of individuals are affected and where the fault lies in the design or use of the system.

An example would be the billing system that handles charge account monthly statements with such timing as to make it almost impossible for the debtor to make the payment without incurring additional interest charges.

The service will also monitor the computer field for early warnings of potential trouble and recommend policies to head it off.

Members of the organization are managers, systems analysts or programmers from industry and government, as well as UVic faculty and staff.

The Victoria Computer Ombudsman Service may be reached by telephoning 477-6911 or by writing the University of Victoria, PO Box 1700, V8N 2Y2.

Labor minister enters battle of construction

Labor Minister Allan Williams will make his first appearance on the B.C. construction battlefront today in a personal bid to head off another total shutdown of the troubled industry.

Williams' meeting in Vancouver with both sides in the prolonged dispute comes two days in advance of the renewed lockout called by the Construction Labor Relations Association.

The minister said he would meet separately with CLRA and the construction unions.

There was speculation by some unionists that he would present the parties with an ultimatum in a final effort to keep the industry operating.

Closed down for 37 days in June and July as the result of a combined lockout-strike, the industry was barely back on its feet when Vancouver-based plumbers struck against 15 contractors two weeks ago.

The new strike, called over such issues as downtown parking privileges and hot lunch allowances, brought the second lockout threat from CLRA Monday.

CLRA president Chuck McVeigh said in Vancouver Tuesday night that his organization's council was "almost unanimous" in its decision and that it was given "strong support" by a general membership meeting Tuesday.

Like some of his union counterparts, McVeigh was hopeful the meeting with the labor minister might provide a way out of the threatened shutdown.

"But if we've got to go, we're prepared to go," McVeigh said. "As much as we don't like to do this, we can't stand idly by and watch a union strike 15 of our members like this. Beyond that, we have said right from the beginning we must have a settlement with all of the unions."

Some 850 contractors are represented by the CLRA. The earlier lockout-strike was the fourth consecutive bargaining-year shutdown.

It involved 15 unions, seven sub-unions and a large percentage of the 40,000 tradesmen working for the contractors. It was also reported to have halted work on as much as $3 billion in building projects.

The end came with a report from industrial inquiry commissioner James Kinnaird, who proposed wage increases of 11.2 to 13.6 per cent on base rates ranging from $9.50 to $12.19 an hour.

Ferry officers ban overtime

Regularly scheduled overtimes will not be affected.

The officers, members of the ferry officers' local of the 35,000 member B.C. Government Employees Union, took the action as a "token gesture of defiance," union agent Peter Marshall said.

The Horseshoe Bay terminal officers met to decide whether to support the Oct. 14 strike called by the Canadian Labor Congress.

Since the ferry officers' 90-day strike mandate expired Aug. 29, they took the token action instead.

Marshall said he doubted that the ban on voluntary overtime would have any effect on travel over the holiday weekend.

Saanich hasn't been getting its money's worth—Lum

Saanich is not getting its money's worth from the Capital Region District, Mayor Ed Lum said Tuesday.

He said cost of regional government to the Saanich taxpayer this year amounted to $500,000.

Regional government, he fears, is building into a bureaucracy of red tape and is assuming far too many responsibilities.

Lum said the regional board was building up a level of government that many felt should be handled by the province.

One area of responsibility which falls into this category is health care.

Lum
. . . bureaucracy

He said there was too great a tendency to give regional districts added functions without it first being proven that such action was the cheapest for the taxpayer.

Planning is another area in which the mayor resents intrusion of regional boards.

Regional districts should concern themselves with planning matters in electoral districts only — not in municipalities, Lum said.

"We have a top-notch planning staff, yet we are being charged for maintenance of the regional district planning department."

Lum said there had been some interference in the municipality's planning affairs by the region.

He said it was awfully difficult to halt the spreading octopus of empire-building because department heads, when requesting additional staff, usually had pretty good facts and figures to substantiate their arguments.

The mayor said he agreed with Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, who recently told regional districts throughout the province to solve their unpopularity problems or have them solved for them.

The government intends to survey the basic terms of reference for regional districts to determine the root of the problems.

Lum said he agreed the time was ripe to determine where regional government was headed.

Cab makes dry run

Unidentified cab driver avoided watery end by shearing off "dry" hydrant near Government and Bay about noon Tuesday. Operating hydrant is at extreme left, near investigating officer's cruiser.

It's your parking problem L.A.B.

The Liquor Administration Branch can solve the traffic problem it created with the opening of its Yates Street outlet as far as Victoria's traffic committee is concerned.

The committee decided Tuesday to set aside a request from the liquor board for short-term parking in front of the store and further moved that the branch be requested to supply a commissionaire to keep the traffic moving in the area.

Mayor Michael Young noted that city's original objections to parking deficiencies at the store on Yates were coming true.

"They've given us two of these," said Ald. Murray Glazier who noted that the Nootka Court store also had no parking provisions for liquor customers.

"I'm more concerned with the people (merchants) who had the inconvenience of street widening during the liquor store construction ... who need street parking in the Wharf and Yates area," he said.

Ald. Alf Hood blamed the congestion on Yates to the increasing double and triple parking by liquor store patrons. City engineer John Sansom told the committee that the traffic department had to employ an extra commissionaire just to patrol that area during the Christmas rush last year.

Ottawa studies complaints

By BILL SMITH
Colonist Reporter

Veterans' affairs department officials are "very intensively" studying complaints about the Memorial Pavilion, Bruce Brittain, the department's deputy minister, said in a telephone interview from Ottawa.

"The minister (Daniel MacDonald) has been fully apprised of the situation in Victoria, and an intensive investigation into veterans' complaints concerning the institution is now under way," Brittain said.

Brittain said the minister would be in Victoria soon "and will certainly be visiting the former Veterans' Hospital."

There is also action on the home front.

Following Sunday's public meeting at which the Victoria-based Veterans' Rights Association was formed, Esquimalt Social Credit MLA Lyle Kahl met with Health Minister Robert McClelland.

Provincial health minister told of veterans' protests

Kahl said Tuesday he discussed the meeting in detail and would meet again with McClelland "when I have assembled more information."

Renegotiation of a federal-provincial Veterans' Hospital agreement and standardized medical treatment for veterans across Canada are being sought by the newly-formed group.

Brittain agreed the document could be changed by mutual consent of both signatories.

He admitted considerable correspondence had been received recently over conditions at the institution, with most letters complaining about patients' food, staff shortages, and the quality of care.

The veterans' rights group is bitter over reduction in services at the pavilion since the takeover of the hospital two years ago by the provincial government.

Full services remain at Shaughnessy veterans hospital in Vancouver, leading to charges that Vancouver Island veterans were being treated as second-class citizens.

Brittain explained that the services were relocated to adjoining Royal Jubilee Hospital, so there would be no duplication of these services.

The deputy minister said it was his understanding that veterans requiring extended-care beds could still be admitted to the pavilion.

"I am right in the midst of a very intensive investigation and will have more to say at a later date," the civil servant said.

Meanwhile, for the first time since the controversy started three weeks ago, hospital employees decided to speak out Tuesday.

Expressing deep concern over staff cutbacks in the past few months, they agreed that complaints would be aggravated still further by more cutbacks to come.

A serious morale problem at the hospital was being aggravated by workers who were not pulling their weight, some told the Colonist.

The workers were all steadfast in their belief that the level of patient care had deteriorated because of shortage of staff.

They also agreed with complaints about food served patients, with one employee saying he wouldn't eat the food or drink the coffee.

"It's a very frustrating situation," one employee said, "especially when people come in to tend their relatives. It makes us feel we are not doing our jobs.

"We are doing our jobs to the best of our ability, but because we are so short-staffed, it is awfully difficult to please everyone."

On an afternoon shift (2 p.m. to 10 p.m.) for example, there is a staff of four to care for a ward containing 35 to 40 patients.

The staff comprises a registered nurse, one orderly, a nurse's aide and a licensed practical nurse. Their task is complicated to some degree by relatives who visit the hospital and demand immediate attention for patients they are visiting.

Later this month, student nurses will be replacing licensed practical nurses and some aides because, as one employee put it: "They are a lot cheaper to hire."

Already complaints have been received about young, inexperienced student nurses being expected to lift heavy men.

Frustration so evident among staff is mirrored in their statement that "it's no use complaining. If you make too much noise you are likely to lose your job."

Accusing the administration of a "couldn't-care-less attitude toward patients and staff," they said there was nowhere they could take complaints because no one seemed to give a damn.

Intersection closed today

The intersection of Cook and Finlayson will be closed today, Thursday and Friday because of road construction and installation of traffic lights, Victoria traffic police said Tuesday.

Drivers going north on Cook should detour by travelling one block west on Lang, two blocks north on Highview and one block east on Merritt back to Cook. The detour is just the opposite for southbound traffic.

No plans to close Memorial Pavilion

Quashing reports circulating locally that the hospital was being phased out, Brittain said he had no knowledge of patients being transferred to Shaughnessy Hospital in Vancouver from the pavilion so that the building could be closed down.

He said there was absolutely no truth in reports that the former veterans' hospital was to be phased out.

Neighborhoods out of plan

Victoria's offical community plan is only a week short of receiving approval in principle before going to public hearing at the end of October.

Council in caucus Tuesday went over the draft proposal prepared by city planning staff and on the advice of the advisory planning commission deleted a supplement to the plan dealing specifically with neighborhoods.

Mayor Michael Young told caucus the commission recommended the section be dropped because in many cases it dealt with areas for which detailed plans were in progress.

However, according to Young, the principles involved in the planning of these neighborhoods are stated within the actual draft.

But at the urging of Ald. Murray Glazier, caucus agreed to incorporate the part of the supplement dealing with the Inner Harbor into the main plan. Glazier told caucus that Victoria couldn't possibly have an official community plan with no specific mention of the Inner Harbor area.

Under provincial regulations, the plan must be completed and filed by the end of November. Essentially, community plans are more a statement of existing and future planning principles for the city than detailed zoning documents.

In other business, caucus agreed to issue a one-year business licence to Marguerite Tours Ltd., subject to approval by the Motor Carrier Commission, to operate sightseeing tours from one motorized trolley car. At the same time, caucus decided that a traffic order must be drawn up limiting the north side of Belleville west of Government to non-motorized tour operators.

Young said that from a safety angle, he didn't want to see the horse tours fighting for space with the vehicle operators.

Caucus also looked at preliminary amendments to a land-use contract with Canadian Freehold Properties Ltd. for the Laurel Point development.

The request from the company to alter the existing contract came earlier this year, when it announced it would not be able to go ahead with an eight-storey hotel complex but was considering one half that size.

Under the amendments, the company wants the Jan. 1, 1978, deadline for starting construction lifted, and that it be held only to completion within three years, once construction starts.

Although the city has heard of no starting date, sources close to the company say plans call for a January, 1977, start.

Solitary picket hits CUPE today

Barring late developments, a lone woman will bring work to a halt today in more than a dozen Victoria union offices.

The action of Elaine Tolonen will simply reflect something happening across Canada, as she carries a picket sign announcing that the big Canadian Union of Public Employees is being struck by its own clerical workers.

The Office and Professional Employees' International Union staged its first one-day strike against CUPE nine days ago.

Ms. Tolonen simply placed a notice of the strike on the door of her CUPE general office, sparing all the other unions sharing the same Quadra Street labor building a picket line.

On that occasion it involved only her immediate boss, CUPE representative Tom Smith, who stayed out to honor her strike.

Since then, Smith has left on holidays and the other CUPE representative, Alex Markides, has returned from his vacation.

There were indications that Markides would show the same support and carry a picket sign of his own.

The building involved is the new labor hall at Quadra and Market, beside the older Union Centre.

Among the union operations affected will be four CUPE offices, two Letter Carriers' offices, two B.C. Government Employees' Union offices, and single offices of the Beverage Dispensers, Hospital Employees' Union and others.

Leaders of the 225,000-member CUPE have come in for criticism — much of it from CUPE staff representatives — for the treatment of their clerical workers.

The clerical workers, averaging $234 a week, were offered wage increases of only 3.5 per cent in each of two years, even though CUPE has been one of the strongest opponents of the Anti-Inflation Board and its eight-per-cent limit on wage hikes.
